Carter Ends Travel Limits

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has decided to eliminate restrictions on American travel to Cuba, Vietnam, Cambodia and North Korea.

In addition to removing the prohibition on using a U.S. passport for such travel without special permission, the treasury department bans on business transactions — including paying hotel bills — are expected to be lifted, U.S. officials said.

The decision, which one official called "long overdue," does not so much signal changes in U.S. policy towards the four nations as it reflects President Carter's commitment to freedom of movement for U.S. citizens, officials said.

The executive order imposing the restrictions must be renewed every six months. The current order expires on March 18 and it will simply be allowed to lapse.

The four are the only nations to which the government presently seeks to bar travel by its citizens.

It always has been possible for members of Congress, journalists, scholars, public health officials, some athletes and some people traveling for humanitarian reasons to get the restrictions removed from their passports.

Numerous business executives, tourists and other Americans are expected to apply for trips in the coming months.

The lifting of travel restrictions is the first concrete action the Carter administration has taken toward better relations with Cuba. Next on the agenda are talks about extending the anti-hijacking treaty that is due to expire April 15.

In a related incident Carter termed inappropriate the apology venture by a U.S. diplomat for alleged United States involvement in the overthrow of a left-wing Chilean government.

In repudiating the statement on Chile by United Nations envoy Brady Tyson, Carter acknowledged the United States has been at fault in some instances for infringing on human rights accords. But he did not put the 1973 overthrow of Chilean President Salvador Allende in that category.

Tyson said in Geneva he exceeded his instructions but did not act contrary to them in apologizing for what he said was American involvement in the ousting of Allende.

$1 MILLION LEISURE BOOM

The shorter work week and the resulting increase in leisure time has made recreation a million-dollar facet of municipal business.

FM Radio Ruling Reversed

OTTAWA (CP) — Bowing to public and industry pressure, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) announced Tuesday that it has reversed its controversial policy prohibiting cable operators from carrying some Canadian and U.S. FM radio stations.

The CRTC said in a release that despite reservations it will allow cable operators previously told to drop the stations to start carrying them again if they had originally been scheduled to distribute the programs before Dec. 16, 1975, when the original policy was announced.

The regulatory agency said it will extend its new policy to allow cable operators to apply to carry any U.S. FM stations picked up over the air as long as the stations do not solicit advertising directed primarily at a Canadian audience.

About 100 British Columbia residents have written to all federal MPs urging a full investigation into all aspects of the CBC, the Commons was told Tuesday.

The letter, sent Feb. 4 by the B.C. Committee for CBC Reform, complained about the alleged steady deterioration of CBC radio and television programming quality, a lack of local progamming and "the lack of respect for people's intelligence." (See other CBC story on Page 56.)

Snow Powders Malahat

About three inches of snow fell in the Malahat-Shawnigan-Lake Cowichan district overnight, requiring motorists to use snow tires and chains.

A weather office spokesman said a series of disturbances from the Pacific will continue to bring stormy conditions to the Mainland and Vancouver Island, with intervals of warmer, perrhaps sunny breaks at least until Friday.

But conditions may deteriorate further Friday with cooler temperatures and the possibility of snow.

Meanwhile, new snow in abundance — and the best conditions of a miserable season — were reported Tuesday by ski resorts serving the Vancouver area.

The welcome snowfall, although too late for rejoicing, was general — at Grouse Mountain, Mount Seymour, Hollyburn and in the Whistler ski country.

A Hollyburn Ski Lodge employee said more than a foot of new snow had fallen in the cross-country ski areas nearby.

"Conditions are the best this year. Definitely," he said. "Business has gone way up."

'French Charter' In Que.

Times News Service

QUEBEC CITY — Premier Rene Levesque says his Parti Quebecois government will adopt a "French charter" and set up a special study group to define the precise independent relationship Quebec wants with the rest of Canada.

In an "inaugural speech" opening a new sesion of the Quebec legislature Tuesday, Levesque said the National Assembly will also deal with a new law to permit the holding of a public referendum on Quebec separation.

Levesque, who departed from tradition by reading the inaugural address himself, said the new language law replacing Bill 22 will be the major pillar in his government's policy of affirming Quebec culture.

But while the new law will be a "clear and vigorous" affirmation of French, it will also be "serene and generous" to Quebec's Anglophone minority and will allow them to keep their schools and identity, he said.

Only through national sovereignty can Quebec develop fully, he said, reading from the 82-page inaugural address, which traditionally is read by the lieutenant-governor.

Independence does not mean isolation from the rest of the world, said Levesque.

"It means, rather, establishing a new type of association, inspired by models employed by other peoples which have enabled them to co-operate and develop together without permanent tensions, politicial inequalities and the constant spectre of animosity in traditional federalism."

Special Police Squad Fighting Crime Wave

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A stepped-up offensive against stickup men and bandits has been launched by a special Greater Victoria police squad. The Times learned of the team Tuesday as the area recorded its 27th armed holdup or attempt of the year.

The latest incident in the rash of armed or attempted armed robberies occurred when a man armed with a sawed-off rifle got about $300 from the Imperial Inn. The man fled, driven by an accomplice.

Oscar Napolean Perron and Edward King Krobel were remanded a week without plea when they came before Judge William Ostler.

A police spokesman said today the special squad played a key part in their apprehension, arriving at the scene within minutes of the 6 p.m. robbery.

The Greater Victoria Emergency Response Team was called out and while officers cordoned off the street, heavily-armed members of the team entered the building and carried out a room-by-room search.

Finding nothing, they withdrew and detectives set up a stake-out. At 10 p.m. the two suspects returned and were arrested without a struggle.

The Times learned from a senior police official that the special squad was created more than six weeks ago to tackle the surge of holdups, described as perhaps the most serious crime wave in Greater Victoria history.

The squad originally involved eight officers drawn from the four core municipalities and the RCMP in Colwood.

But for the past month, because of manpower pressures on the smaller forces, the team has been pared to four investigators, two each from the Saanich and Victoria police departments.

But another highly-placed police spokesman, in on the setting up of the anti-holdup team, said the squad is in operation.

The Times has also learned that Greater Victoria police chiefs have asked the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) to prepare an analysis of the crime situation here.

The chiefs want to know how organized the criminal activity is and the analysis is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

Asked to confirm CLEU's involvement, Gregory uttered a curt "no comment."

3 D.C. Hostage Dramas

WASHINGTON (AP) — In nearly simultaneous invasions, a band of gunmen seized 50 to 100 hostages in the headquarters of a Jewish organization today, while another armed man held hostages at a Moslem religious center 10 blocks away.

A short time later, gunfire flared at the District Building, Washington's City Hall, and police radio broadcasted a report that people may have been killed there. Mayor Walter Washington was reported barricaded in his office. Guards told other city workers to lock themselves in too.

Several hours after the take-over began at the B'nai B'rith building, a reporter calling the building was answered by a woman. A man took the telephone from her and told the reporter: "We've going to kill a lot of people."

Asked why, he replied, "Don't ask me why you . . . just listen. They're showing that picture in New York about Mohammad, the Messenger of God."

A new movie, Mohammad, Messenger of God, about the Islamic prophet, recently opened. The man declined to give his objections to the movie and hung up.

There was no immediate indication that the incidents were connected.

The first incident where gunmen invaded the B'nai B'rith international centre, seizing at least 50 hostages, was followed by a separate incident at a Moslem religious centre 10 blocks away.

An FBI spokesman said he understood that six Black Muslims, two of them armed with automatic weapons, were holding the hostages at the B'nai B'rith headquarters, a downtown office building seven blocks north of the White House.

City Budget Hearings To Be Held in Secret

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria city council's budget scrutiny sessions over the next several weeks will be conducted in secrecy because Mayor Mike Young is concerned publicity might damage senior staff morale and force some department heads to resign.

Young made the comment to reporters Tuesday, after council's informal caucus meeting supported a motion to bar news media representatives from a series of committee-of-the-whole meetings which will consider detailed departmental estimates as a preliminary to budget preparation.

In early January the provisional budget total stood at $42.4 million, representing an increase of $2.4 million in 5.9 per cent over the actual 1976 budget.

"I think it has become so serious that we had to act," the mayor said. "The city was in jeopardy of losing some of its senior employees."

Young said it is a "very dangerous thing" to risk a deterioration in staff morale merely for the sake of publicly discussing departments' spending proposals, which in the early stages are best thrashed out between the appropriate department head and the alderman responsible for that function.

During earlier council discussion of his recommendation for in-camera meetings, Young had said that if a public budget-screening session produces controversy and criticism of certain officials, "we can be severely, grossly misconstrued."

But in an interview outside the committee room, he denied the comment implies any criticism of news media distortion.

He said he meant that some aldermen might adopt a "quisling-type attitude" toward certain department heads, which would be "dutifully recorded" by reporters and give the public a bad impression

The mayor also denied a reporter's suggestion that the policy is a convenient way of discussing sensitive and perhaps politically embarrasing issues without fear of publicity.

"That's conjectural happenstance which could occur but does not occur," he said.

He pointed out that until

Best Supporting Actor nominee Jason Robards (All The President's Men) has been called by many critics the finest actor currently on the American stage. Robards inherited his love for the theatre from his late father, stage and film star Jason Robards, Sr. Robards Jr. studied acting at the American Academy of Dramatic Art and he made his stage debut as the hind end of a cow in Jack and The Beanstalk.

He won national fame in 1952 at New York's Circle In The Square Theatre in Eugene O'Neill's The Iceman Cometh. In the years following Robards has appeared in several of O'Neill's works including Long Day's Journey Into Night and A Moon For The Misbegotten.

His personal favourite is A Thousand Clowns which he also did on film. Although he is not too fond of most of his early Hollywood films, he does admit a fondness for The Ballad of Cable Hogue which was directed by Sam Peckinpah. His numerous film credits include The Hour of the Gun, St. Valentine's Day Massacre, Isadora, Julius Caesar and Pat Garrett and Billy The Kid.

Inquiry Ends Probe

An RCMP spokesman in Vancouver said Tuesday the force has discontinued its investigations into "possible criminal offences" in connection with the dispute over conditions in the Crown counsel offices.

The spokesman said the investigation was discontinued because of the appointment of Vancouver lawyer Peter Butler to conduct a public inquiry.

An RCMP inspector asked the Vancouver Sun Tuesday to arrange an interview with reporter Hoi-Yin Der who wrote the story quoting prosecutor McKinnon as saying he had been offered the bribe of a salary increase.

The inspector said he was investigating "responsibility for what appears to be several criminal offences."

The Sun refused the request and referred the RCMP to its legal counsel.

Despite the inquiry announcement, Opposition spokesmen attacked the government in the legislature.

There's an atmosphere of intimidation and fear among those who depend on the provincial government, Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) told the house Tuesday.

Lauk said the inquiry is "symptomatic of the kind of thing that's going on in the province."

During debate on ministerial estimates for the premier's office, Lauk said Premier Bill Bennett has set the tone in B.C. which shows his lust for power.

"He will threaten anybody, anyone in this province because he feels they threaten him," Lauk said.

Bennett has demonstrated "arrogance in office, threats to the opposition, threats to minority groups," he said.

Coal Talks Hush-Hush: Gibson

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson accused the government Tuesday of holding secret meetings to formulate a policy on major coal developments in the province.

During debate on budgetary estimates for the premier's office, Gibson said the government has been meeting with representatives of the mining industry to determine a fair royalty on coal without allowing the public to be involved in any discussions.

Outside the legislature, Premier Bill Bennett described Gibson's charges as "nonsense," saying that the government is researching a coal policy but nothing has been finalized and there have not been any negotiations with any specific group.

Gibson said the government has repeatedly refused to publicize various reports on B.C.'s promising northeast coal reserves and it is expected that a hard and fast policy will be announced without any public discussion.

He urged the government to make public information it has on coal development, including proposals being made on the subject of tenures.

After 23 hours of debate, the premier's estimates passed by a voice vote.

Gibson asked repeatedly if Bennett had any knowledge of secret meetings involving cabinet ministers or senior government officials concerning a provincial coal policy.

The letter referred to a meeting of the "coal cabinet committee," saying it had instructed the association to "establish an industry-government working group to discuss issues related to coal policy formation."

"The objective is to bring together a group of people with a broad knowledge of the coal industry who will review the various policy issues which are now in the final stages of decision," the letter said.

Fyles said in the letter that the committee would be composed of four members from the industry, chosen by the coal association and the Mining Association of B.C., and three or four senior government officials.

Budget Hearings Secret

last year, departments' budget estimates had always been processed initially by committee chairmen and department heads before being presented to council in actual budget form.

Under the new policy adopted last year all aldermen are involved in this procedure, but after preliminary cutting the full budget would still come forward for scrutiny and discussion.

In answer to a reporter's question, Young admitted that a recent Capital Region Board controvery involving criticism of regional planner Peter Hammer's budget proposals had influenced his attitude.

MOREMORE MORE

When he first made his recommendation at the caucus meeting, some aldermen appeared surprised and wanted to know the reasons for such a move.

In a somewhat convoluted explanation, Young said: "I don't think I am prepared to tolerate any public criticism of department heads or discussion or criticism of budgets that might take place, and therefore I am really in essence restricting comments which members of council may wish to make."

Ald. Murray Glazier said a planner, for example, might use the budget exercise to test out certain ideas on council, some of which he knows won't succeed and which will attract criticism. But the weeding-out takes place and finally a "defensible" budget arrived at.

"Having been through that exercise on the Capial Region Board I know the hurting that goes on between department heads and the political people," he said.

Glazier said he could see the merit in a closed-door approach provided "we can have a real honest confrontation with staff over which programs are going to survive," but added that he is "most reluctant" to endorse in-camera meetings in general.

Crime-Fighter Squad Formed by Area Police

"I don't want to say anything for fear it will aid the criminal element," he said. "All I can say is we are doing everything in our power, jointly and collectively, to put an end to the problems."

A Times survey of the crime wave shows since the beginning of the year a total of $42,497 has been taken in armed holdups and police have recovered about $30,000.

The survey shows three banks have been held up as well as holdups or attempted holdups at three service station, three drive-in restaurants, five hotels and motels, and 10 grocery stores and small specialty shops.

A downtown theatre was robbed, a taxi driver held up in Saanich and two women accosted by a man with a knife in James Bay.

In addition there have been two prison escapes — both from Wilkinson Road jail — two abductions, a murder-suicide and a shooting.

Officials in the justice system are reported alarmed by the statistics. The docket in provincial court in Victoria is apparently crammed with cases and a backlog is growing.

Fromer provincial court judge Edmond St. Jorre said recently he has never seen such a rampage of violent crime in all his years in Victoria.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of city police detectives, said the rash of robberies is "unparalelled."

His brother Robin, inspector and head of detectives in Saanich, said violent crimes in the municipality jumped 40 per cent in 1976 over the previous year.

"The way things are going it will probably be much higher this year," he said.

Chief Peterson said there have been six incidents in Saanich this year where weapons appear to have been used.

"It's shocking," he said. "We've never run into this sort of thing before, at least not to this extent."

Staff Sgt. Ted Foster, head of the Colwood RCMP detachment said most of the crime is probably related to the drug underworld and points out the heroin supply has dried up sending prices soaring for users.

"The addicts need the bucks and they're resorting to the usual means," he said.

Peterson, however, believes the incident of violent crime in Saanich at least, is due to other factors.

"Our assessment is the culprits are, for the most part, young men, generally unemployed, and needing money — maybe not needing money in the true sense of the word, but needing it to live a lifestyle they want."

He does not believe the crimes are organized or the work of gangs.

"The disabled can cool their hels in the waiting roms."

The premier must be confronted with a crisis before those involved are permitted to meet with him, Lauk said.

Lauk was referring to the so-called crisis in the Vancouver prosecutors' office. He said a meeting requested by prosecutor Gil McKinnon was granted only after bribery and intimidation charges appeared in a newspaper.

Lauk also said the premier has no understanding of the significance of a general election and what it empowers the elected party to do.

"Do you think that that's a mandate for total and utter dictatorship?" Lauk asked.

Lauk said there's little left for the government to do as many of the responsibilities are in the hands of the judiciary.

A premier should know justice almost by instinct not by privilege, Lauk said, adding that Bennett bullies others because he is insecure.

The attitude of Bennett has made public servants afraid to give their superiors in government candid advice, Lauk added.

M-B to Stop Logging For 9 Days on Island

MacMillan Bloedel Tuesday announced plans to shut down its Port Alberni area and Queen Charlotte Islands logging operations for just over a week because of high log inventories.

About 2,200 employees will be out of work for nine days over the spring break and Easter because of the move, more than 1,700 of them in Port Alberni.

David Turner, the company's vice-president of logging, said an overload of logs has been created by unusually favourable weather on the coast and, "We have no alternative but to reduce log production to keep our log inventories at manageable levels."

Turner added that other MacMillan Bloedel operations throughout the province are not affected by the closure.

"We decided to keep current operations going on the east coast of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland because these divisions normally have more extended fire closures in the summer than West Coast and Queen Charlotte operations."

In Port Alberni, Earl Foxcroft, president of International Woodworkers of America Local 185, said loggers aren't happy about the closure but they aren't surprised by it either.

"We're not pleased about the situation," he said, "but it's looked on as just one of those things. Usually we'd expect to be shut out by snow about this time of year."

Foxcroft said the closure only enforces the union's argument, advanced in ongoing contract negotiations, that loggers should have a guaranteed income.

He said irregular seasonal closures for one reason or another have always been considered as, "just part of the job, but it's pretty diffucult on the workers.

"You don't know from one year to the next how much you're going to work and you can't plan your budget the way most families can — that's why we want a levelling off factor."

TAX BUYERS' BID QUASHED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice George L. Murray dismissed an application Tuesday by three income tax refund buyers to quash a New Westminster bylaw regulating their activities.

National Tax Services Ltd., Surrey Tax Services Ltd. and Vanguard Collection Agencies Ltd., challenged the New Westminster bylaw alleging it was prohibitive rather than regulatory.

NEIGHBORS OPPOSE HOME FOR WOMEN

Residents fighting a female detention home on Graham street remain opposed after hearing a presentation Tuesday from social workers and corrections branch officials.

Mrs. Kay Harris, of 2816 Graham Street, said today the proposal of turning 2804 Graham into a minimum security residential home for women between the ages of 17 and 25 is not appropriate for the neighborhod.

"To convert the house would require a zoning change, and that would change the whole character of the neighborhood," she said.

"A lot of people are fearful, not so much with the girls themselves, but with the types that might be invited into the neighborhood."

Mrs. Harris said a Block Bros. realtor had been around the day before asking her and her neighbors if they wanted to sell.

"I guess they're trying to cash in if anyone is scared enough to sell," she said.

The meeting was called by corrections branch after residents circulated a petition opposing the home.

Social worker Brenda McBain said there are no correctional residences for women on Vancouver Island.

Any women sentenced to serve time must be sent to Oakalla where first offenders are put in with hardened criminals.

At the proposed residential home, occupants would be first offenders convicted of non-violent crimes such as shoplifting or passing bad cheques, project director John Stewart said.

The facility would have no security measures such as fences or bars. The staff would consist of a housekeeper, a case worker and three other staff members on hand at all times.

Most of the women would be working during the day and allowed to go out a night subject to curfews.

"Our fears may be unnecessary," Mrs. Harris said, but added that wherever there are 17 to 25-year-old women, there are going to be boyfriends.

"What would happen if a boyfriend got loaded, came to visit his girlfriend, but couldn't get in? He might be mad enough to take it out on the neighborhood," she said.

Sixty-eight neighbors signed the petition opposing the home. Mrs. Harris said she found only one person fully in favor of the home, and he was a renter, not a homeowner.

A few others said they wanted more information but the vast majority were opposed, she said.

At the meeting, one woman said if her daughter got into trouble, she wouldn't want her to go to Oakalla. "We should give this a chance," she said.

A typical wintertime depression which moved over southwestern B.C. Tuesday afternoon continues to give gale force winds and heavy showers frequently mixed with hail to the south coast. Over the north coast conditions are slowly improving as drier air slowly moves towards the Charlottes. In the interior most areas are reporting snow. Another disturbance laying further west is already approaching B.C. and will gradually spread cloud and rain to coastal areas Thursday afternoon. However, partial clearing is expected over most coastal areas this evening and in the interior areas Thursday ahead of the next incoming depression.

Peaceful, Prosperous, Says Idi

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
Washington Post

CAIRO — President Idi Amin of Uganda Tuesday strongly defended himself, his regime and his country, asserting that Uganda is peaceful, prosperous and governed according to law.

In a press conference at the Afro-Arab summit meeting here, Amin was by turn somber and jovial as he ranged for an hour over topics from the controversial death of the country's Anglican archbishop to the abundance of zebras and giraffes in Uganda's national parks.

"There is no cause for alarm," Amin said. "Uganda is one of the most peaceful countries in the world."

As he spoke, Ugandan officials handed out copies of a book, published by the Ministry of Information, that Amin said gives conclusive evidence that the archbishop and two cabinet ministers who died with him were part of a plot by former president Milton Obote to return to power.

It contains photographs said to show Chinese-made arms imported by "pro-Obote fanatics to butcher innocent Ugandans." It also reproduces the text of what purports to be a "memorandum" to supporters in Uganda's Langi and Acholi tribes outlining a scheme to overthrow Amin. The late archbishop, Janan Luwum, is named as a sympathizer with the alleged plot.

Amin has been accused of carrying out massacres among these two tribes and of arranging the murder of the archbishop and the cabinet ministers. The official explanation of their deaths is that they were killed in an auto accident while trying to overpower the army officer who was taking them to be interrogated. The book contains what are said to be autopsy reports from a Kampala hospital saying they died of skull fractures and internal injuries, not bullet wounds.

"We have the rule of law," Amin said. "Anybody who commits a crime is tried according to the law." He said 16 persons are in jail awaiting trial on charges of complicity in the plot and "the Ugandan masses wanted them executed immediately" but he insisted that they be tried.

Amin dwelled at length on some of his favorite themes. He said the imperialists Zionists, Americans, British, Kenyans and Tanzanians are trying to overthrow him. He said he was the "only African" strong enough to challenge these forces. He said Uganda has better toruist attractions than Kenya, with "all kinds of animals" in the game parks and plenty of inexpensive food. But he also dealt unflinchingly with questions about the kind of country he is running.

Amin denied reports that there are Cuban military advisers in Uganda. "We have excellent relations wih Cuba but at the moment we don't have Cuban military advisers," he said.

He angrily rebuffed a suggestion that an international commission of inquiry be allowed into Uganda to investigate reports of atrocities there.

TAX DEPT. SEIZES PARK POSSESSIONS

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two palatial Embassy Row homes, three luxury cars and other personal property belonging to South Korean businessman Tongsun Park have been seized by U.S. Internal Revenue Service agents here in an apparent effort to keep the assets from being sold or moved out of the country.

According to sources close to Park, who has been abroad since last October, about 15 IRS agents entered Park's homes late Monday afternoon. The agents posted government "seizure" notices on the front doors and put the homes under 24-hour guard.

The agents have spent the past two days making an inventory of Park's furnishings and valuables, including antique furniture, oriental rugs, jade, porcelain and numerous are objects. Tuesday the agents also seized Mercedes, Cadillac and Lincoln Continental automobiles at one home.

In court documents filed just before the agents moved in Monday afternoon, the IRS said it was acting because Park "has neglected or refused to pay" nearly $4.5 million back taxes the IRS claims he owes for 1972 through 1975.

Justice department officials said Tuesday the civil tax action by IRS is unrelated to the current criminal investigation of allegations that Park played a key role in a South Korean government scheme to buy influence on Capitol Hill. Park is reported to have dispensed hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash and gifts to members of Congress to ensure continued U.S. support for the regime of South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

PLO-Jordan Link Reported

Times News Services

CAIRO — Yasser Arafat has agreed to link his Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) with Jordan, Arab sources say, and this may help remove the chief obstacle to resumption of the Arab-Israeli peace talks in Geneva.

Israel has refused to negotiate with a separate Palestinian delegation but has not objected to an Arab proposal that the Palestinians attend as part of the Jordanian delegation.

The sources said King Husein of Jordan, at a lucheon meeting Tuesday with Arafat, asked the Palestinian leader whether he wanted to establish a formal link before or after the Geneva talks are resumed, possibly this fall. Arafat replied that he would like to forge the bond before the conference, the sources said.

Details were not revealed, but a Palestinian official said the meeting of Hussein and Arafat was the "beginning of the return of Palestinian-Jordanian relations to their proper framework."

The meeting was the first personal contact between the two leaders since Hussein drove the Palestinian guerrillas from Jordan in a bloody crackdown in 1970.

Arafat is expected to receive approval for a linkup with Jordan at a meeting next week of the Palestinian National Council, which acts as a Palestinian parliament and sets PLO policy.

Hussein and Arafat are attending the 60-nation summit meeting of African and Arab states called to mobilize the solidarity against Israel and the white governments of Rhodesia and South Africa.

"The meeting marks the beginning of the road toward normalizing Jordanian-PLO relations," a Palestinian Liberation Organization spokesman said. But it was also the result of a long Arab effort to bring Hussein and Arafat together — and remove a major obstacle to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace plans.

Sadat and his ally, President Hafez Assad of Syria, have proposed that a Palestinain state be set up on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza strip and joined to Jordan in a confederation.

Israel, while rejecting any role for the PLO, has also said the West Bank should eventually be tied to Jordan — making the confederation plan a keyy link in hopes for a negotiated Middle East solution.

Until recently, such a tie was out of the question

DICTATOR THREAT SEEN IN U.K.

LONDON (Reuter)—A segment of the Labor party expressed alarm today at signs of polarization in public attitudes in Britain and said the country might turn to a dictator if the economy continues to decline.

The group, known as the Social Democrats and including centrist and right-of-centre Labor members of Parliament, published a booklet entitled What We Must Do — A Democratic Socialist Approach to Britain's crisis.

It warned that "proud nations cannot live on a diet of uninterrupted failure" and said Britain's institutions have a built-in bias against change, while class bitterness still hampers progress.

If current economic trends continue, Britain's average national income would likely be, in less than a decade, about one-half the French and on a par with that of Greece. the booklet said.

Darts on Dogs Planned by CIA

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The CIA once was prepared to use treated darts on guard dogs in an effort to gain entry and bug a North Vietnamese embassy, but decided against it because the dogs ate drugged meat instead, documents show.

CIA agents wanted to bug the embassy in an unidentified South Asia nation and were equipped with darts coated with a "dog incapacitant," the reports said.

The darts also were treated with a timed antidote, so the dogs would behave normally when they awoke, the report said.

But the darts were unnecessary because "the guard dogs — in gross violation of proper guard dog behavior — ate meat treated with dog incapacitant which was offered by the entry team," the report said.

The U.S. army, meanwhile, disclosed that it secretly conducted 239 germ warfare tests in the open air between 1949 and 1969, releasing live but supposedly harmless microscopic "bugs" at Washington's Greyhound bus terminal and National Airport as part of the experiment.

The idea, according to a two-volume report the army gave to the Senate health subcommittee Tuesday, was to learn how to wage biological warfare and defend against it.

Rightists Targets In Spain

Washington Post

MADRID — The Spanish police, always diligent in the pursuit of what they considered leftist enemies of the state, are for the first time in 48 years going after rightist extremist groups that once were allies and "ideological collaborators" of the late dictator Francisco Franco's law enforcement agencies.

The chase is reluctant and Spanish authorities have yet to charge any Spaniard with an act of violence against leftists. Nevertheless, the detention last week of 14 rightists. two of them Spaniards, has eclipsed in the minds of the Spanish public the continuing arrests of leftist extremists and Communists throughout the country in the past month.

The crackdown on rightist extremists coincided with the beginning of Supreme Court deliberations last week on the Spanish Communist party's bid for legalization. The party has been outlawed since 1939, when Franco's forces defeated the short-lived Spanish Republic.

Morally Handicapped

The complicated new provincial handicapped benefit package announced last week has the effect of taking the heat off the Bennett administration on a very delicate issue. It's fine to rout out welfare bums living off the taxpaying public, to paraphrase popular philosophy, but its quite another thing to have handicapped people in wheel chairs protesting government has drawn the sting and sick. In political terms the government has drawn the string from the handicapped protest, but a careful reading of the fine print shows an administration, so obsessed with its financial image, human compassion must take second place.

A $350 monthly income for disabled persons is considered barely adequate according to federal statistics. But a handicapped single person in British Columbia receives a maximum $265 per month plus a new shelter allowance of up to $57. It works this way: the Ministry of Human Resources will pay up to 75 per cent of housing costs above a basic $75 per month up to a total of $57 per month. (In Vancouver the average apartment costs $192.) Even with maximum benefits and shelter allowance some disabled persons are forced to live meanly on this allowance. In effect, approximately 10,000 single handicapped persons, crippled or maimed through no fault of their own, eke out existence below a federally established poverty line. Considering the small amount of public money involved here one can only conclude the provincial government is callous.

Financial arrangements and timing of the new benefit package indicate a subtle tuning, reinforcing the the callous label. Under federal-provincial cost-sharing arrangements Ottawa pays 50 per cent of any increase in handicapped funding. For example when the former New Democratic Party came to power the basic rate for single handicapped people was $220 of which $110 was paid by the federal government. The NDP increased the rate to $265 per month on their own, before any cost-sharing arrangement was worked out with Ottawa.

By contrast the current administration has kept an Oct. 1 $22.50 federal increase in general revenue earmarked for handicapped people. Another $35 per month destined for those aged 60 to 64 on social assistance was also held back. Since the new handicapped package does not come into effect until July 1 the provincial government will have saved nearly $7 million at that time or about $700,000 more than the $6.3 million it plans to spend on the new handicapped program. It also means that at the end of the current fiscal year the government will have about $5 million in accrued welfare benefits to help balance a sickly budget.

Handicapped spokesmen claim that when the Bennett administration transformed Mincome into Gain about 28 per cent of the benefits were lost. Now it appears that lost benefits are being reinstated and sold as largesse from a compassionate government. How else can the province adequately explain a $25 million saving in handicapped benefits? The so-called "homemaker program" which allows the spouse of a disabled person to work without loss of family benefits is a warmed-over version of a similar NDP scheme contained in Mincome legislation. Under the Socreds this aspect of the program became subject to a means test. Mincome also featured quarterly cost of living increases. A similar clause is contained under section eight of the Gain legislation, although it has never been proclaimed by the current administration.

Any increases for the handicapped are welcome in times of 9.4 per cent inflation, but the manner in which this government approaches its responsibilities leaves much to be desired. Rather than complicated programs, many of which are left to bureaucratic discretion, and elaborate justifications for financial juggling, why couldn't the province just level with the people? Sure times are tough and the government is scraping the barrel to balance its budget, but it doesn't admit it's strapped. Nor does it promise special consideration for needy cases. Instead, we see the now familiar shuck and jive routine, which shows this administration to be morally handicapped — a condition under which no government can rest easily no matter how much money it saves.

All In The Family

Victoria Mayor Mike Young's decision to seek re-election next November is like a mustard plaster on the heaving chests of the hopefuls. While Aldermen Ron McKenzie, Bob Wright and Murray Glazier warmly welcomed the mayor's decision — for some obscure reasons none of them plans to challenge Young next time around — Victoria's mayoralty campaign will simply become a three year affair with each alderman trying to establish his credentials as the annointed one for chief magistrate.

Under the new biennial election system all nine city council seats will become vacant this November. If the gentlemen's club at city hall expended their energy in tearing each other apart over the mayor's chair there would only be one winner and perhaps three vacant council seats. By keeping their powder dry this time around, the boys in the club are reasonably assured of being re-elected to council, giving them ample time in the public spotlight to build on their tiny empires. It is interesting to speculate on the eventual outcome. McKenzie and Wright might exhaust and discredit themselves if they continue their verbal vendetta, leaving the calm Glazier to pick up the pieces.

Whatever the result, it almost guarantees the usual Victoria mayoralty race: one establishment candidate and a covey of ruffled feathers fighting for a fleeting moment of fame which the electorate always denies them. It's not a healthy situation for the democratic process. Since the boys at the club won't rock the boat this November, it would be good to see some other credible candidates come up from the citizenry. Few people besides Saanich Ald. Joe Bourque will care if they are nominally NDP, Socred, Liberal or Conservative, if they can propose realistic alternatives. As long as the mustard plaster remains firmly in place, Victoria's municipal politics will remain on the sick list.

Journalism and Objectivity

OTTAWA—About two months ago I wrote a column about that Great Annual Canadian Emotional Debate, the seal hunt. In it, I argued the case for Newfoundlanders and against, by implication, baby seals. Back came more angry letters than for any column, those on bilingualism in the air and capital punishment included, in about a year.

The point, here, isn't whether my opinion was right or wrong. It is instead that my opinion was biased. I feel, as I wrote, a "cultural solidarity with Newfoundlanders, a gut 'us' vs. 'them' emotion." There is just no way I can be objective about the seal hunt.

Now project yourself into the same circumstances. Your shtick, or prejudice, or passion, is that you belong to a particular religion or ethnic group; are a feminist, say, or a free enterpriser who believes that the only good government is no government. Or whatever. Suddenly you become a reporter and have to write about that subject. There is just no way that you, either, could be objective.

Lethal Problems

Today, a majority of Quebec reporters find themselves in the same ambiguous position. Prime Minister Trudeau, almost certainly, was correct when he said, "the overwhelming majority of employees in Radio-Canada (the French-language network) are of separatist leaning."

This fact is as undeniable as it is surprising. In private, most Quebec reporters are separatists for the same reason that most English-Canadian reporters are more leftist than their editors and publishers, and on an issue like the Mackenzie gas pipeline, tend to tilt their copy in favor of Indian land claims. Most reporters are young. They are (though it's disguised by professional cynicism) closet romantics. They are suckers for an underdog, which Indians and Premier Rene Levesque (that little guy who smokes too much) appear to be.

So what? The public believes only what it wants to believe. Though the press, almost unanimously, advocated abolition of capital punishment, 80 per cent of Canadians wanted it retained. Levesque lost elections in 1970 and 1973 though Quebec reporters were as partial to him then as they are now.

Serious, and for our country perhaps lethal, problems do remain. The press does influence public opinion, particularly in Quebec where Radio-Canada, which traditionally has been the nurturing ground for so many artists and singers and playwrights and politicians, including Levesque, functions as the central nervous system of a society that doesn't trust messages from the outside.

The Quebec press, in part because that's the French style, in part because it has no columnists, does mix opinion and fact in its news stories to a much greater degree than does the press elsewhere. For most Quebec reporters to be separatist sympathizers at a time when separatism was the brave ideal of a bunch of outsiders is one thing. It's quite another thing today when separatism is the explicit objective of an entrenched government.

English-Canadians do make things seem worse than they are by confusing protectiveness with propaganda. It was cultural solidarity, not a conspiracy, that caused the Quebec press to play down Levesque's car accident. In exactly the same way, a fact now conveniently overlooked by the federal Liberals, the Quebec press a year ago downplayed the succession of so-called "French-Canadian" scandals in Ottawa, like the Sky Shops affair and the "judges affair." Most provincial newspapers are just as protective about their province.

Where excusable protectiveness leaves off, inexcusable propaganda does, however, begin. For example, shortly after his election, Levesque discussed with reporters the infamous private information system, containing files on 40,000 individuals, compiled by former Premier Robert Bourassa. The system, said Levesque, was harmless, composed mostly of newspaper clippings. Quebec reporters would never have accepted from Bourassa so bland an assurance. They would have demanded proof, as they did not from Levesque, that the system was to be destroyed.

As a more recent example, no Quebecer could have known by reading his newspapers that U.S. President Jimmy Carter had gone to the limits of the bounds of diplomatic propriety in order to express his support for a united Canada. The headline in Montreal-Matin was: Carter Takes No Position On Quebec. Le Devoir never mentioned the subject in its news stories.

Unchallenged and unchanged, this manipulation of the news will take Quebecers, not into independence necessarily but into a dreamworld.

News Manipulation

What's to be done? The worst possible response is the McCarthyite smear of Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet in waving around an alleged list of alleged separatists in Radio-Canada. Almost as bad is the yelling and shouting at Radio-Canada by Liberal MPs, including those, like Labor Minister John Munro, who are unilingual.

What, then, are the best responses? Competent management self-administered within Radio-Canada, where many supervisors have lost their nerve. As a reinforcing corrective, pressure is certain to be applied by Quebecers themselves who want, as much as you do, to be told the full truth about the most important story in their lives.

Lastly, professionalism. Quebec reporters may be proud of their government, as they have every right to be. They are as proud of their own profession. One of the most competent reporters that I know of in the country is Evelyn Dumas-Gagnon. She happens to be editor of Le Jour, the separatist weekly. I would trust most of what Dumas-Gagnon writes, except when she's being protective about Quebec, just as I am about Newfoundland.

Business Gov't.

Like many other districts, in B.C. we are being faced in Penticton with the closure of a large retirement home. "Haven Hill" has 76 residents and they are being told that they might have to find other accommodation. Many of them were interviewed on TV and most of them were worried and did not want to move. One elderly lady said "I am praying about it already". Another resident who has resided there 12 years said "I hope I never have to go to a private rest home". All in all I would say it must be a shocking and disruptive influence to these people who in my opinion should have peace, quiet and security.

My wife and I are 75 and 76 and are managing in our own home. We get help for two hours weekly for some of the things we cannot manage (my wife has a heart condition). We pay our way but are very disturbed at the way this government is so dedicated to helping big business and the very wealthy. The Succession duty bill is one example. There is an age old saying "beware of the Greeks bearing gifts". They are going to introduce a new Pharmacare bill. The only thing it will do for the elderly is to make them pay out an extra $25.

There is one phrase often used by politicians or presidents of large corporations, and it makes me see red: "We must see that there is a good climate for business to work in." In a speech last year at the Memorial University in St. John's, Eric Kierans stated that in the past five years corporate profits increased 131 per cent, and in many cases their assets doubled. In the name of goodness what more do they want? Pity the large corporations and big business!

In my opinion I don't think the big corporations or big business are paying their fair share. They get too many subsidies, write-offs and tax-evading dodges that our governments so kindly give them.—G. R. Hunter, Summerland, B.C.

U.S. Experience

A study of the American experience leading up to their Civil War might be helpful to us at this time of crisis in Canada, not that we should follow their example but rather try to avoid their mistakes.

James Buchanan's attitude as president was that while he was against secession, if the southern states broke away there was nothing that he could do about it. Abraham Lincoln, on the other hand, in his inaugural address stated: "I hold that, in contemplation of the universal law and of the constitution, the union of these states is perpetual . . . no state, upon its own mere notion, can lawfully get out of the union".

My suggestion is that South Carolina and the rest seceeded because they had been told on the highest authority that they could get away with it. Had Buchanan taken Lincoln's attitude it is most unlikely that the attempt would have been made.

Isn't it about time that our national leaders had the courage to state once and for all that no province can unilaterally decide to quit Canada and that to try to do so would be an illegal act which would not be countenanced? As matters stand now who can blame Quebec for feeling that it is free to go? — F. L. P. Anderson, 217-1900 Mayfair Drive.

Houston Concern

I am writing on behalf of the Concerned Citizens of Houston. We are a group formed to oppose plans to build a sawmill on a centrally located farm in our town.

This site has some of the best soil in the Bulkley Valley and is held within the agricultural land reserve. We are not against the development of a second mill in Houston, but we feel this farm is a poor choice for many reasons.

Our town council has ignored half of Houston's voting population by approving Eurocan-Weldwood's application to have the property removed from the agricultural reserve. They also seem to have disregarded the opposition by four major government departments, and the opinions of our newly elected mayor, Bas Studer.

The Land Commission will be holding a public hearing on this issue on March 8, 1977 at 8 p.m. in the Houston community hall. We intend to present several briefs, and we will resist the application to the limit of our capabilities.—Bill Mann, Les Kearns, Jim Jacques, Dr. Brian Finnemore, Concerned Citizens of Houston.

CRD Dictatorial

James Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region Board, has sometimes been accused of being dictatorial and autocratic. One might now add the words biased and vindictive. His latest choice for a sewer pump site involves the expropriation of the Shoal Bay home of Richard Bower, one of many people opposed to such a construction near homes.

The fact that Mr. Bower was the president of the Shoal Bay Ratepayers' Association and also a member of the citizens' advisory commitee to the Oak Bay municipal council involved in picking a pump site, makes him a prime target. It is quite evident that he has been a thorn in the flesh of the Capital Region Board and Ker Priestman, the consulting engineers, who were foiled some nine months ago in their plan to build the pumping station on park land.

Another site being considered, Earn Street, off Transit Road, has also been strongly opposed as it is surrounded by homes and would involve expropriation and the destruction of a pretty treed and flowered entrance to Anderson Hill Park.

Although one is supposedly living in a democracy, it would appear that those who openly oppose the powers that be are the ones singled out for retribution. In the case of Mr. Bower this is rather ironic as he and the Shoal Bay Ratepayers' Association has turned down, as a matter of principle, pump sites suggested by an Oak Bay alderman and the capital region engineer, situated far away from their own homes but close to other people's homes. After all, one has to live with one's self. I hope that Mr. Campbell can. — Valerie Melville, 500 Transit Road.

Balanced Books

The current protest of the Vancouver crown prosecutors who object to the provincial government's hiring of private lawyers as crown counsel on a temporary basis at rates of some five times that of the salaried prosecutors is certainly understandable and should be reviewed. One wonders, however, what sort of distortion of logic and calloused lack of feeling exists in a government that while paying $5,000 per month to temporary crown counsellors deducts $25 from a $300 compensation award to a handicapped person.

This incident is apparently another symptom of the "balanced-book" obsession of a government which failed to pass on a federal grant to the handicapped of the province. — Laurence Cottrell, 4621 Cliffwood Place.

Hockey Violence

I am one of the hockey fans who agree with and have signed the petition against the anti-violence clause. The press left me with the impression the petition was filed away with things to forget about. If this is the case then obviously the feelings of 2,000 people are unimportant.

Mayor Mike Young was not courteous enough to appear at the caucus meeting.

Ald. Ron McKenzie stated he received calls regarding hockey violence, but failed to mention the fans who have phoned and written letters in defence of hockey.

If hockey is such a violent sport, then why not an anti-violence clause for boxing, wrestling, karate, lacrosse and movie theatres, as these can be very violent? Hockey is a body contact sport, so players occasionally lose tempers. This is why we have referees and league governors. Has anybody ever heard of touch hockey?

Out of approximately 43,000 minor hockey players only 300 players required doctors' attention. The police have attended several games and found no cause to stay. Surely they would have remained if they saw violence.

In my opinion if people do not enjoy hockey they should not attend, because their interference can only ruin it for the fans who thoroughly enjoy it. — Mrs. G. Harvey, Victoria.

The CBC 'Booby Trap'

MONTREAL STAR
An Editorial

The Broadcasting Act created a booby trap for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation when it declared that one of the duties of the national broadcasting network was to contribute "to the development of national unity."

A phrase like that can mean everything or nothing. It can mean, at one extreme, that the CBC can be assumed to be contributing to national unity simply by existing. It can mean at the other that the network has a duty to suppress news and views which threaten the unity of the country. It is almost certain to mean, in the minds of the members of the government of the day, that the network has a duty to tell the people what a splendid job they are doing.

The battle over the network's role has been going on almost as long as it has existed. John Diefenbaker put the pressure on 20 years ago to block criticism of his government on a morning radio commentary. Pierre Trudeau was threatening a few years ago to close down the French language service and show films of Chinese vases if it did not stop peddling separatist propaganda.

Now that national unity is facing its greatest threat in decades, it is not surprising that the reaction among the politicians and within the network has become even more pronounced. In the past month, almost half of the federal cabinet, and a few assorted senators, have denounced the news media in general and the CBC in particular for failing to do all they should to hold the country together. And the CBC president, Al Johnson, has responded to the new situation by announcing a series of broadcasts which will join the French and English networks.

There is no doubt that a substantial number of people who work for the French network of the CBC are separatists. The notion of independence first took root in the artistic and journalistic community which produces the people who prepare and perform on television programs. There is no doubt either that separatist views are heard on the network. Since they are held by a significant proportion of citizens and are the subject of a crucial national debate, they ought to be. What the political critics have not been able to establish, in all their denunciations, is that the national network or its employees have deliberately set out to provide a one-sided or distorted view of the issue.

Parliament can establish a television network but it cannot make television programs. That job belongs to the people who work for the network. They, and the network management, have a duty to see that the job is done with reasonable balance and fairness, as well as with a topical zest which will attract the interest of listeners and viewers.

Shakeup Threatens Mexico's Siesta

By ALAN RIDING

MEXICO CITY — The Mexican siesta hour, which in practice lasts as long as three hours and is used for eating and not sleeping, is being threatened by a major government reorganization aimed at trimming and shaking up the country's huge and inefficient bureaucracy.

The reorganization involves reform of the entire administrative structure, but perhaps its most revolutionary feature is the change in working hours so that no civil servant can take more than two hours for lunch and all must finish their day's work by 7 p.m.

Traditionally, Mexican ministers and senior officials begin their three- or four-hour "political lunches" at 3 p.m. and then often work past midnight. In the mornings, they are up early for "political breakfasts," but do not appear in their offices before 11 a.m.

These hours were not only disruptive of family life — the divorce rate among cabinet members has been well above average — but, because junior civil servants and most businessmen work more normal hours, there was also minimal co-ordination within the government.

But Mexico's new President Jose Lopez Portillo, who took office two months ago, feels that many of the country's problems of underdevelopment come from poor administration. His first major initiative was therefore to try to inject efficiency and productivity into the bureaucracy.

Significantly, nine years ago, Mr. Lopez Portillo headed an obscure government commission studying administrative reform. Today his cabinet is made up largely of former members of that commission, including Finance Minister Julio Rodolfo Moctezuma Cid, Trade Minister Fernando Solana, Planning and Budget Minister Carlos Tello and Communications Minister Emilio Mujica.

The technocratic orientation of the new cabinet implies a commitment to rationalize the operation of the 17 ministries and the 799 state-owned agencies and companies, which range from steel complexes to television stations.

The new working hours, staggered between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. to reduce traffic jams and to save energy, are only the first stage of the reorganization.

Almost as ambitious is the government's decision to cut down on unnecessary personnel. At present, with 1.2-million workers, the government is by far the largest employer in the country, providing jobs to 20 per cent of the work force. Lopez Portillo has ordered that all excess staff either be found new jobs or be dismissed within six months. And, as part of his economic austerity program, he has strongly discouraged ministers from taking on new permanent employees.

But in a country where plitical discipline and personal loyalty are traditionally rewarded with jobs in each new administration, observers feel that it might be politically hazardous to apply this rule too strictly.

The major government reorganization, however, is going ahead, with some ministries disappearing, some being created and others being fused. Perhaps of greatest significance is the establishment of an Office of Planning and Budget Management, which is answerable directly to the president.

The powerful state-owned companies and agencies are also for the first time being brought under tighter control through the creation of various "heads of sectors" or "superministers" who will supervise their investment and spending programs. For example, the Minister of National Patrimony and Industrial Development, Jose Andres de Oteyza, has 247 state companies in his sector.

Traditionally, enormous power has been concentrated in the hands of each president to the detriment not only of individual ministries but also of the 31 state governments. Now, Lopez Portillo is trying to decentralize the bureaucracy, although it is too early to gauge how much real power will in fact be transferred.

Unlike his predecessors, though, the new president, who is a lawyer by profession and a public administrator by training, has begun holding regular cabinet meetings.

As a first step, he has formed separate economic and political cabinets at which full debates take place, with Lopez Portillo acting more as a premier than absolute president. Official sources said, however, that the president plans to consult his entire cabinet on major issues.

Except for the changed working hours, the reorganization has so far stirred up little public interest or attention. But many observers here believe that it may eventually be seen as the most sweeping reform of the six-year Lopez Portillo administration and could have far-reaching effects on the country's development.

Wrong Question At Wrong Time

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

We don't make a habit of encouraging politicians to dodge reporters' questions, as they don't make a habit of needing any such encouragement. But occasionally a question makes the rounds that is so silly, and divisively silly, as to deserve nothing more than a refusal to answer or a pious evasion.

The silliness currently fashionable — mainly among television interviewers who should perhaps be viewed as entertainers rather than reporters — is to ask Quebec federalists, members of Parliament or members of the federal cabinet, where they would choose to live if Quebec should separate from the rest of Canada.

It is not easy to fathom the shallows of a mind that conceives such a question. Does it start from the assumption that the Quebec separatists are right when they accuse the Quebecois in Ottawa of being uprooted transplants, irrevocably alienated from their friends, their families, the communities in which they grew up? Or is it a clumsy and shabby attempt to extract from the federalist Quebecois a loyalty oath that equates commitment to Canada with commitment to English Canada?

Premier William Davis has said that he feels Quebec to be a part of his country. Has anyone challenged him to say that, in the event of Canada's breakup, he will prove this commitment by moving to Montreal? The danger in the where-would-you-go question that has been put to a number of Quebec ministers in Ottawa is that beneath its surface of silly curiosity it is the opening of a no-win game. Any answer, beyond a reasonant profession of commitment to Canada and affirmation of faith that Canada will endure, is bound to be divisive, or to be perceived by some one somewhere as divisive which, in the emotionally charged context of speculation about the future of the country, is the same thing.

For example, when the question was put to Health Minister Marc Lalonde, he made a brave start: "You know I'm a Canadian and I'm proud to be one, but what ties me as a Canadian is the fact that I do believe that the French-Canadian community, the French-speaking community in the country is, well, its own future will be best guaranteed by being, remaining, in Canada, being very active in Canada . . . I don't believe that Quebec will ever separate."

To that, however, he added: "If Quebec were to separate I would have no hesitation whatever as to where I would go. I would go to Quebec."

How much credibility would a Quebec federalist have left in his own province if he said that, in the event of a breakup, he would pull up stakes?

But these are not reasonble times. They are times of uncertainty about the future of the country and, as such, times of anxieties, resentments and suspicions that are perhaps not rational, and certainly not admirable, but regrettably human. In such times the only safe response to such a mindlessly divisive question — a question that imposes on the federalist Quebecois as a fait accompli, to which he must react, the very outcome that he is working to prevent — is to dismiss it as hypothetical.

For it is hypothetical. Quebec, until further notice, is a part of Canada. And as long as it is, commitment to Quebec is commitment to Canada. When that is no longer true and understood to be true, the country will be already sundered in fact if not in the constitutional legalities.

The Time of the People

russell baker

"The chic thing this year is people," writes a cheese-shop operator from First Avenue. "I guess it started with Jimmy Carter trying to get the government interested in the existence of people, which could be wrong, as I am not really a keen analyst of these things.

"Anyhow, whatever the cause, suddenly everybody has to have people to show off to his guests when he wants to throw a really swell bash, except that these swell-party throwers have been out of it for so long that they don't know where you get a real people on short notice. They don't know you go on the bus or the subway and you've got people all over the place.

"Anyhow, one night just as I am closing the cheese shop, in comes this guy, a real East Sider — the $25 hair-style job, the pants you can't sit down in — and he is obviously in a panic. 'Are you a people?' he asks.

" 'Well,' I say, 'I'm living on next month's salary and I don't drive a Mercedes-Benz. I've got a wife instead of a requent companion. And my wife goes to the A. & P. instead of Acapulco. If that's not a people, I don't know what a people is.'

"Anyhow, the long and short of it is he takes me to a party where all the women are dressed in thousand-dollar Russian-peasant costumes and the men are going on about injustice and where to get the perfect artichoke and complaining about the people not being treated right. 'Speaking of the people,' says this guy who dragged me in, 'I want everybody to meet Otto who is into the commerce of cheese on First Avenue.'

"Anyhow, to make a long story short, in no time I am surrounded by heavily dressed types with the smell of new Ferraris on them and women with last names like von Hotzenberger, and they are listening fascinated while I tell them about provolone and gorgonzola.

"Not that I want to talk about cheese, you understand. What I really want to talk about is Konrad Lorenz's anthropological reservations about the fundamental basis of democracy, which I could do in my neighborhood saloon in Queens, but which I figure is not what this crowd expects people to talk about. So I give them cheese. Strictly for laughs, you know.

"Anyhow, next day into the cheese store comes this guy from the non-people classes. I can tell he is not people because I have seen his picture in People magazine, where I know any editor who let a real people get into it would immediately be fired, for the very good economic reason that people are not going to shell out good money to read about somebody who is living on next month's salary and going to the A. £ P.

"Anyhow, this guy says he hears I was boffo as people at last night's party, and would I come to his place that night to round out the guest list as, at present, he doesn't have anybody invited who isn't famous.

"What have I got to lose? They want people? I'll give them people. Who knows? Next month they're all into ballet again and my big moment is passed. Carpe diem, as the Romans said. That means, take it when you can get it.

"Anyhow, I go to the party. The real thing. Upper Fifth Avenue. Doormen yet. 'How come you're down here opening doors?' I ask the doorman. 'Aren't you people?'

"Okay, one party leads to another. One night it's a West Side penthouse. Another night, the Village. Pretty soon, I'm getting invited to Washington. Sit-down dinners for twelve in Georgetown with senators and kids with Georgia accents, and everybody is eating it up. I mean you'd think they really want to hear about brie and camembert, although I realize they are actually just feeling good because they figure they are getting close to the people.

"Anyhow, to make a long story short, one night I am on Park Avenue. Everybody is there. Jackie Onassis, Norman Mailer, Marion Javits and Beverly Sills, Barbara Walters and Walter Cronkite. And I suddenly realize that I have been going to these parties for weeks, and — you know what, Otto? — I am the only people I have ever seen at any of them. Either they don't know any people to invite except me, or else — and then it hit me — they are inviting me for myself!

"Well! It comes over me really strong. Enough of this cheese act. They want me. Walter Cronkite has just asked me for the monthly figures on mozzarella imports, and Barbara is asking, 'Has there been a big gorgonzola crop this year?' and I say, 'Actually, I'd rather discuss Konrad Lorenz's anthropological reservations about the fundamental basis of democracy.' And I launch into an explanation of Lorenz's work.

"Anyhow, pretty soon I am talking only to myself, and I begin to notice some glares, and overhear somebody say, 'Rather a poor party, don't you think? They couldn't even get any of the people to come.'

"Next day, no invitations. All week, no invitations. Socially I am dead. Maybe, I figure, the time of the people is over. Then one night I see Nick the butcher closing the shop early. 'What's up, Nick? I ask. 'Oh,' says Nick, 'I'm off to Park Avenue to talk about loin of pork.' Nick is the new people. He won't last long, though. All he really wants to talk about is baroque architecture."

Set to Lay Down Lives for Seals

EDMONTON (CP) — A Detroit veterinarian, a former Vancouver journalist and three Norwegian students said Tuesday they are prepared to die on the ice floes off Newfoundland and Labrador to save seal pups.

They were among 18 members of the Greenpeace Foundation's Seal Campaign 77 who made a one-hour stop here while en route by train to Newfoundland where they intend to stop the annual seal pup hunt.

Paul Watson, 26-year-old former journalist and leader of the expedition, told reporters Canada will get an international black eye as a result of the hunt. "As a Canadian I feel sad about that, but I feel more allegiance to the ecology of this planet than to Canada."

Vibeke Arvidsson, a young Norwegian student and actress, said she joined the expedition to "make the Norwegian people aware of what they're doing."

Dr. Bruce Bunting of Detroit, who joined the group to administer to injured seal pups, said press coverage in Detroit of his participation in the hunt was "incredible."

He said all the local television stations and both daily newspapers had run stories.

"The feeling I get in Detroit is that Americans have really lost respect for Canada because of the seal hunt," he said.

The Greenpeace expedition eventually will have 28 members. They want the hunt stopped because they say the seals pups, killed for their valuable pelts, are becoming extinct.

Romeo LeBlanc, fisheries and environment minister, refutes this, saying the hunt provides valuable employment for Newfoundland. He has vowed to prevent Greenpeace from stopping the hunt.

On Tuesday, LeBlanc signed an order allowing a Newfoundland RCMP detachment to be drafted as guards against the anti-sealers.

Watson said the group's tactics this year "are designed to shut down the hunt."

"The tactics are non-violent, but dangerous to us," he said.

"They are perfectly legal, but we don't care to reveal them at this point."

Last year, the Vancouver-based group, which has used non-violent tactics to protest nuclear testing and whaling, planned to spray the white-coated seal pups with a dye, making their pelts worthless. But after this was declared illegal by the fisheries department under the Seal Protection Act, Greenpeace members used their bodies to shield the seals from the hunters' clubs. One man, Brian Davies, was arrested and charged but later acquitted in court, a ruling LeBlanc intends to appeal.

Franz Weber, a Swiss millionaire who joined anti-sealers last year after reading publicity, is sponsoring the trip to Newfoundland this year of 300 journalists to report on the hunt.

Weber has offered to establish a synthetic fur industry in Newfoundland to replace the seal hunt but LeBlanc, who met him recently to hear details of the offer, accused him of "blackmail and bribery."

U.S. Sees Kitimat Oil As Easy Mark: Anderson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Creation of a deepsea oil port at Kitimat, and of a pipeline linking the coastal community with Edmonton, would be like a gold rush that siphons all the money out and leaves the problems behind, former Liberal leader David Anderson said Tuesday.

The former provincial party leader was speaking to the first public meeting of the Kitimat Oil Coalition on the Lower Mainland. The group is opposed to a consortium-backed project now under study by the National Energy Board.

"They (American interests in the project) expected the application for this Kitimat pipeline to go through without any real examination, especially with what they would get from environmental groups if the application was in the U.S.," said Anderson.

PWA's HQ MOVE ALL BUT DONE

EDMONTON (CP) — The move of the head office of Pacific Western Airlines to Calgary from Vancouver is complete "for all practical purposes," Transportation Minister Hugh Horner told the legislature Tuesday.

Replying to questions by Gordon Taylor (Ind.-Drumheller), Horner said he had no figures on how much cost PWA bore because of a restraining order issued last year by the federal cabinet.

The board chairman of the airline had not decided whether to try to recover damages.

The federal government wanted a Supreme Court of Canada ruling on whether Alberta could purchase the regional carrier without going through a Canadian transport commission hearing.

Convention Ruling May Ease

WASHINGTON (FP) — Canadian and American tax laws that discourage organizations from holding foreign conventions may be eased on a "reciprocal" basis, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

Macdonald, who met here with U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, told reporters the Carter administration official was "very sympathetic" to the idea.

The finance minister said U.S. tax laws that took effect Jan. 1 — allowing Americans to deduct expenses for attending only two foreign conventions a year — had resulted in a loss of $12 million in Canadian convention business.

Canada also limits income tax deductions to only two foreign conventions a year, with the added proviso that the locations be "reasonably within the scope" of the conventioneers' activities.

Macdonald, who raised the convention issue during a general discussion of economic issues, said the reciprocal arrangement could be dealt with in ongoing negotiations over a Canada-U.S. tax treaty.

Congressman Barber Conable, a New York Republican, suggested last week that the U.S. restriction on foreign conventions should be continued as long as Canada continues to disallow tax deductions by Canadian companies for advertising on U.S. border television stations.

Grizzly Reserves Ample: Phillips

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips says there now are about 1.3 trillion cubic feet of proven natural gas reserves in the Grizzly Valley, more than enough to make Westcoast Transmission Co.'s proposed pipeline profitable.

Phillips told reporters in an informal news conference Tuesday that British Petroleum Canada Ltd. has proven reserves of 650 billion cubic feet.

The minister said these reserves are more than adequate to sustain $100-million, 80-mile pipeline.

Phillips said in today's economy, about two billion cubic feet of reserves are needed to justify every mile of pipeline.

He said that up until the current decade, 10 billion cubic feet of reserves were needed, but since then, the price of gas has risen so that less gas is required.

Phillips qualified his statement later, however, and said that "you've got to knock off about a third" of the reserves which will be lost through purification processes. As a result, somewhat more than two billion cubic feet of raw reserves would be needed for every mile of line.

PELTIER APPEAL

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Defence lawyers for Leonard Peltier Tuesday filed a pretial motion seeking a court order to end what they alleged to be surveillance and investigation of the defence team.

The motion also asked U.S. District Court Judge Paul Benson to order a full accounting of alleged activities by the government to date.

Peltier, 32, of Grand Forks, is a leader of the American Indian Movement and is scheduled to go on trial Monday on two counts of murder. He was arrested in Vancouver last year and extradited to face the charges.

Tough Times Predicted When Controls Lifted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Montreal economist Judith Maxwell said Tuesday that Canada faces some tough adjustments when the federal wage and price controls program ends.

"I don't pretend that going back to the market is going to be an easy process," she told the Canadian Conference of the Financial Executives Institute.

"I've had a lot of businessmen tell me, as much as they'd like to get rid of profit controls, they have a great fear of getting rid of wage controls."

But Mrs. Maxwell, director of policy analysis for the C. D. Howe Research Institute, said individual companies must determine their own operational viability.

"Do you want controls forever?" she asked a questioner, adding that she does not see any alternative to returning to a freer play of market forces.

In her address, Mrs. Maxwell said, "I think that many Canadians, in their general philosophy, would prefer to rely on market forces rather than governments.

"But as soon as they find themselves in a ticklish situation created by market forces, they have a tendency to run to governments for help."

Mrs. Maxwell told another questioner she does not have much faith in the tri-partite approach to economic problems, with business, labor and government at the same bargaining table.

"I just don't see how anyone in such sessions can be accountable," she said. European countries where the tripartite approach has worked have a different social and economic structure.

Mrs. Maxwell said there is a sharp contrast between the kind of easy access that AFL-CIO president George Meany has enjoyed with U.S. presidents, and the "highly-adversarial" type of meetings that CLC president Joe Morris has had with Prime Minister Trudeau.

She said, however, that greater consultation between management and labor clearly is needed to reduce some of the unnecessary frictions in Canada's economy.

Mrs. Maxwell said Canadian governments might consider legislation requiring that votes on strikes or settlement offers be conducted by secret ballot. But such legislation could only be introduced when the industrial atmosphere is calmer.

Mrs. Maxwell was also dubious about the notion of giving labor representatives a seat in the management board room of private enterprise firms.

Poison Found In Fish

OTTAWA (CP) — Unsafe levels of Mirex, one of the most persistent pesticides, have been found in many fish species in Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River, says a report by the federal environment department.

The report says the presence of Mirex has been found in some fish at levels 10 times the safety level of 0.1 parts per million.

It says more than 40 other long-lasting poisonous chemicals have been found in Lake Ontario fish.

The report is scheduled to go to Health Minister Marc Lalonde and the fisheries and environment minister Romeo LeBlanc, April 4.

It says Mirex causes cancer in rats and mice and takes longer to break down in the environment than DDT.

Mirex is described as a cumulative poison which is stored in body fat because the human system has a hard time breaking it down. Thus, eating low levels of the chemical during a long period might be dangerous.

The report says that when Mirex does break down it can form either the deadly pesticide Kevone, which has caused severe nervous system disorders in U.S workers in a Virginia chemical plant, or photomirex about which little is known.

The two major sources of Mirex in Lake Ontario are said to be on the U.S. side of the lake, in the Niagara and Oswego river areas. Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corp. of Niagara Falls, N.Y., has been identified as the main source of the chemical.

Hooker Chemical has not produced Mirex since 1967 and has not processed or packaged it since April, 1975.

Half World's Food Lost to Pests

Washington Post

DENVER — Almost half of the food produced in the world today is lost to pests, depsite the fact that world pesticide use will reach a record 4.1 billion pounds this year.

That amounts to more than one pound of pesticide for every man, woman and child on earth, Dr. David Pimintel of Cornell University at Ithica, N.Y., told the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science last month. He said that is an increase of 20 per cent in the last five years.

Progress is not being made against the world's pests, Pimintel and the University of California's Dr. Ray Smith said, because the pests are developing a growing immunity to pesticides, and because so much pesticide is being used that it is destroying the predators and parasites that are the natural enemies of the pests.

"Fully 90 per cent of all the eggs and larvae of crop pests would be destroyed by their own natural enemies if we made better use of pesticide," Smith said at a press conference. "We're not doing any better than half that, because of our overuse of pesticide."

The leading users of pesticide are the Central American countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua, where 70 million pounds of insecticide are used to kill cotton pests every year. In El Salvador alone an estimated 2,400 pounds are used on every square mile of cotton fields. The tiny country consumes one-fifth of the world's parathion, a leading insecticide.

Cotton yields have not increased in Central America, Pimintel said, because overuse of insecticide has killed off the parasites that destroy the boll weevil and bollworm. At the same time, the indiscriminate use of pesticide is responsible for 4,000 to 5,000 human poisonings every year in Central America, he said.

Moreover, mosquito populations along the coastal plains of Central America have grown so resistant to pesticides that they have begun to carry and spread malaria in all four countries, the scientists said; in El Salvador alone, the incidence of Malaria rose from 25,000 cases three years ago to more than 80,000 last year.

Pimintel and Smith said that about 33 per cent of the food lost in the world is lost to pests before it can be harvested. Another nine per cent is lost after harvest, much of it to rats before it can be marketed.

Dr. Max Milner of the massachusetts Institute of Technology said that in one recent year rats consumed 50 per cent of the sugar and corn, and up to 90 per cent of the rice harvested in the Philippine Islands. Milner said that in India alone it would take a train 3,000 miles long to haul the grain eaten by rats in a single year.

CNR Has $10M Profit, First in Two Decades

LONDON (CP) — Robert Bandeen, president of the Crown-owned Canadian National Railways, said today the CNR showed an over-all profit last year, the first in 20 years. Sources said later the profit figure would be about $10 million.

Bandeen said the profit is modest "when compared with our total investment and our gross revenues but it marks the beginning of a new era for Canadian National."

In a Canada Club speech, Bandeen said: "Over the past few decades, Canadian National has consistently shown an operating profit but its performance has been hidden by the costs of servicing the heavy burden of long-term debt.

"Last year, however, we showed our first over-all profit in 20 years, including servicing the debt charges."

The CNR's annual report for 1976 has yet to be published and Bandeen did not mention a specific profit figure, but sources said it would be in the neighborhood of $10 million.

"We now are in the midst of a reorganization of the corporation designed to improve our financial performance by dividing our operations into clearly defined profit centres," Bandeen said.

"The future of our financial performance is looking bright because government action is being taken to relieve Canadian railways of some major burdens which have caused serious losses over the years."

He said relief appears in the offing in such areas as the 80-year-old Crow's Nest Pass freight rates act.

"The government appointed a commission which confirmed that the two railways (CNR and CP Rail) lose nearly $90 million annually on handling grain.

"And the Prairie provinces are beginning to realize that the antiquated rates are doing the West more harm than good by inhibiting the development of processing industries and jeopardizing the development of a much-needed modern grain handling system."

Bandeen also pointed to the problem of what he called "redundant branch lines . . . which should never have been built even in the days when the railway was the only form of mechanized land transportation."

Two years ago, the Canadian government appointed a commission to "look into the transportation of grain, including the branch line system."

"Although the report has yet to be published, we are a lot closer to working out a rational network of branch lines in the West than we have ever been because of the facts brought out at the hearings."

Weekend Moving

TORONTO (CP) — L. A. Louthood, publisher of Weekend Magazine, said Tuesday the magazine's editorial department will move to Toronto from Montreal in May because of economic reasons "that have nothing to do with any other questions."

Louthood said most of the magazine's material is freelance and the centre for English writers and artists is in Toronto.

The move will affect about 12 staff members of the 350 employees who work for the Montreal Standard Publishing Co., which publishes the magazine. The executive offices will remain in Montreal.

Weekend is carried in 21 newspapers across Canada, including The Victoria Times and has a circulation of 1.7 million.

Ex-Guard Denies Knowledge Batteries Contained Heroin

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former Oakalla guard admitted in county court Tuesday that he had imported lantern batteries from Hong Kong but denied any knowledge of 8½ pounds of heroin that was found in a shipment that arrived here.

William Lewis Reisig, 35, is charged with conspiracy to import drugs into Canada, conspiracy to traffic in heroin and possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

He also denied conspiring with Clifford Fook Hing Jung, 44, jointly charged with him on the first two counts.

The charge covers the period between July 1, 1974 and March 28, 1975, when Reisig was arrested at a Vancouver home.

Officers had been alerted by customs officials when one of the barreries tested failed to emit a spark.

The 35 batteries were each found to contain two vials of heroin with an estimated total street value of $10.5 million.

Reisig said he ordered the batteries through a man named Sun Cheeng, whom he had met at a Kung Fu demonstration at the University of B.C. in 1972, and from whom he had ordered previous shipments of oriental goods.

He told county court judge W.A. McClelland that he had ordered 40 of the batteries for which he had paid $100 and intended to sell at $4 each, with the intention of ordering more if of good quality.

Evidence of tape recorded conversations was admitted earlier in which there were long conversations with Reisig and Cheeng regarding th the shipment.

Reisig said he was unable to explain letters in Chinese characters which were found in his bedroom which the Crown alleged used the term "white woman" which meant heroin.

DISPLAY VIOLATING HANDICAPPED LAWS

The handicapped will have a hard time learning anything about the Maritimes if they have to rely on the Atlantic provinces' Museumobile now visiting Saanich Peninsula.

It has no ramps for wheelchairs and requires normal dexterity to cope with steep stairs leading into the highway semitrailers fitted out with Atlantic Canada exhibits.

Like many other government buildings in this area, the museumobile contravenes federal regulations requiring wheelchair access, notes Ken Abbott-Smith of Sidney, one of the handicapped relying on a wheelchair for mobility.

"The island is loaded with illegal federal buildings," he said.

Boat Cruise At $1,000 For Council

SMITHERS (CP) — A five day boat cruise from Vancouver to Kitimat and return appeals to members of Smithers council.

They passed a motion Tuesday night to send three aldermen to the North Central Municipal Association meeting which will be held as a boat cruise from May 10-15. Cost will be $45 a day for each alderman for five days, and return air fare which is another $130 each. The total outlay is just over $1,000.

They also left it open so more municipal representatives can go if they want to.

Burns Lake council had earlier refused the invitation to the meeting, saying it would cost too much, while Houston has said any alderman can go who chooses, as long as he pays his own way.

Beef Squeeze Outlined

OTTAWA (CP — One of Canada's largest meat packing plants is reaping huge profits while cattle producers continue to sustain heavy losses, the Senate agriculture committee was told today.

Roy Atkinson of Saskatoon, president of the National Farmers Union (NFU), told the committee that losses to beef producers in 1976 could reach $200 million.

In Alberta, 1976 losses to a farmer with a herd of 138 cows, including a return for labor and management, came to $26,635.

"But in 1976, Canada Packers' profits were up to $21.53 million from $16.24 million in the previous year," the NFU president said.

Atkinson told the committee that beef producers are being squeezed out of business in a market tightly controlled by packers, retailers and brokers.

Improving stabilization programs to protect farmer income would solve only part of the problem, he added.

The national meat authority proposed by the NFU is needed to give producers some clout in the marketplace, he said.

Atkinson said any farmer who opposed orderly marketing on the ground that it weakens private enterprise must realize that the system already is tightly controlled and works against the farmers' interest.

A meat authority would be accountable to Parliament and thereby to the farmer and the public, he said.

Six CUPE Locals Ask for Mediator

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Six Canadian Union of Public Employees' locals involved in 1977 contract negotiations with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association have applied for the services of a government mediator while a seventh local has opted for immediate settlement.

Local 1978, representing 155 Capital Regional District workers, noted 60 to 12 Monday night to accept the latest offer which gives a six per cent salary increase in a one-year contract, and includes a dental plan.

The remaining six locals, which have been negotiating jointly, are seeking a 12.3 per cent total package consisting of an 8 per cent salary boost plus fringe benefits. Union officials admit they do not expect to capture the entire package, however.

Local 1978 broke away from the unions' joint negotiating committee last month because of disagreements over the size of the settlement being sought. The breakaway move came after an eighth local, the 200-member inside workers Local 388, had settled with the GVLRA for an increase of just over six per cent in wages and fringe benefits.

Mike Hennett, acting president of Local 1978, said he is happy with the agreement which had been reached after a series "of very amicable negotiations."

Bennett said the contract is similar to the one signed by Local 388, except for the addition of a dental plan and "a number of localized items."

Bob Cunningham, spokesman for CUPE's joint bargaining committee, said the remaining six locals will stay united in their drive for a better deal.

Cunningham said he's sure the joint council can acquire a contract superior to the ones signed by the independent locals.

"But nobody's kidding themselves that we'll get it all," he added.

Cunningham attacked GVLRA negotiator Carl Anshelm for settling with the separately negotiating locals, saying the tactic will only delay the over-all settlement.

He said it makes more sense to deal with the eight locals as a single group, especially since the numerour municipalities are all represented by the GVLRA.

"He made a farce of the whole bloody affair," Cunningham said of Anshelm. "If he'd said at the outset that he wanted to negotiate independently we'd have been all settled by now."

Cunningham said the joint council had decided to apply for a mediator because, "we were making no progress whatsoever with Mr. Anshelm . . . as far as we're concerned he was just beating around the bush."

Cunningham said he expects a mediator to be named sometime next week, "and until then we'll just wait to hear from the labor minister."

Anshelm's only commmen when informed of the unions' application for mediation was: "Well, that's their prerogative."

Anshelm had said last month that the GVLRA was planning to seek mediation, but later backed down from that position saying that he doubted "if the efforts of a mediation officer would serve any useful purpose."

Anshelm refused comment on the settlement with Local 1978, saying he was not free to discuss the matter until after the GVLRA had ratified the agreement. That move was expected to take place sometime today.

The six locals which have yet to settle with the GVLRA represent about 4,800 employees in Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Saanich, Victoria and the Greater Victoria School Board.

U.S.-Banned Bottles Given OK in Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal health department has approved plastic beverage bottles made from acrylonitrile as containers for everything but alcohol, a spokesman said today.

He said the department is aware of a decision announced Monday by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to suspend its approval of such bottles effective March 11 because of leaching of the chemical into the product the bottle contains.

The spokesman said the bottles are not widely used in Canada—plastic bottles for beer and soft drinks do not contain acrylonitrile — but it is contained in some wrappers for cheese and cold meats.

Board Members Axed

WASHINGTON (WP) — The White House has quietly fired three members of the renegotiation board, the small agency that is supposed to recover excessive profits from defence contractors. The new chairman and two replacements have been among the board's severest critics.

White House deputy counsel Margaret McKenna telephoned acting chairman Rex Mattingly and member Christopher Sylvester at about 5 p.m. Friday to say that President Carter had accepted their resignations effective immediately. She left a message accepting the resignation of member Norman Houston, who is in Africa.

Mattingly had been an oil distributor and Republican national committeeman and state chairman in New Mexico.

Sylvester, after working 20 years for Sen. Milton Young (R—N.D.), wanted a change. Young has said he asked President Ford to find "something appropriate" and Ford put Sylvester on the board.

Houston came to the board from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, where he was a deputy assistant secretary. Earlier Carter met with the three men he told he intends to nominate:

—Goodwin Chase, 65, a former Tacoma banker who has been on the board since 1973. From the start, he has dissented repeatedly — and often alone — from actions and non-actions that, he protested, were needlessly costing the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars.

—William McQuillen, 33, who worked for 2½ months in the Carter campaign after spending 1½ years as counsel of the House banking subcommittee that monitored the board and drew up and pressed legislation to overhaul it.

—Harry Van Cleve, 53, general counsel of the cost accounting standards board, an independent agency of Congress headed by Comptroller-General Elmer Staats. Van Cleve has had 16 years of government procurement and accounting experience, including four years as general counsel of the general services administration.

The White House announced Tuesday that Carter had designated Chase to be chairman of the board, but did not announce either the dismissals, or the selection of McQuillen and Van Cleve.

Aircraft Spotting Growing Hobby

EDMONTON (CP) — Standing in the rain at airports collecting aircraft registration numbers may sound boring.

"But it just depends on your interests," says John Kimberley. "In Europe, busloads of hobbyists descend on airports and spend hours trying to spot as many aircraft as possible."

A personnel officer for Northwest Industries Ltd. at the city's municipal airport, Kimberley sometimes spends lunch hours driving around the airport checking new or different aircraft.

"But I've graduated above just collecting numbers, now I take photographs of aircraft."

In a book listing his color slides, he has dozens of shots of different DC-8s, 707s, Otters and military jets.

Aircraft spotting is a popular hobby in Europe, where books are published listing every aircraft registered in a country and every aircraft likely to visit, whether scheduled or charter.

When he was living in Dublin, Kimberley decided he wanted to see every British European Airways Viscount aircraft.

"I remember I had seen 59 different ones, but they had 60 registered. I spent whole weekends at airports, looking for that last plane.

"Then one day I saw a Viscount land and taxi towards the terminal—and I couldn't believe it when I saw that G-APIM registration."

"I used to go to Shannon International and watch aircraft land for refuelling on the trans-Atlantic runs. Most landed at night, and I'd sit up all night marking down registrations.

"The airport staff let me eat in their cafeteria—they treated all the hobbyists well."

But in North America, the situation is different, because of security precautions and viewing decks which are often closed.

"The hobby involves a little detective work—but that's part of the fun."

In Canada, the fledgling hobby is organized by the Ontario Aviation Enthusiasts Society, based in Mississauga, Ont., where Toronto International Airport is situated.

Look Homeward Angel: Poignant, But Faltering

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Look Homeward Angel is a play about conflict; the warring of ideas versus dreams; between opposing personal ambitions; betwen youth and age expressed at times within the same individual.

It is conceived by playwright Ketti Frings from the novel by Thomas Wolfe, in terms of a family locked into a situation which is disliked by all but sustained through bonds of necessity or love.

Victoria Theatre Guild's production of this poignant sometimes searing drama is currently on stage at Langham Court, remaining until Saturday. It's a difficult play to do on the small Langham Court stage where the isolation of areas are scenes-within-scenes is next to impossible.

Nevertheless, Robert Price as director, and Gysbertus Timmermans as lighting designer have coped successfully, achieving quite good definition and in Timmermans' case, effective mood. Monica Jarvis's set design has merit but would have profited by a more imaginative execution.

Price himself plays the important role of the elder Gant, perceptive father, embittered husband, hobbled artist and sometime raging alcoholic.

Assuming the dual responsibility of directing as well as playing a lead is in almost all cases, a dangerous tactic. And while this is one of Price's best performances to date, being strong, sustained and at times genuinely touching, it is also at times undisciplined, needing an objective directorial shaping.

Climactic scenes involving him especially tend to lose focus and form. An example is the scene near the end when in an outburst of rage over frustration and defeat, Eliza Gant and her husband go berserk for a few moments in a symbolic physical attack on the boarding house that represents both their chains and their lifeline.

This must be developed as a truly terrifying explosion of pent-up anger and anguish, pinning the audience in its seats and preventing anything more than an hysetrical giggle to escape. Unfortunately as I saw it the scene broke down into raw broad comedy, which, considering the talent on the stage I'm sure could have been avoided.

We spend the evening within and without the boarding house, Dixieland, in North Carolina in 1916; with Eliza who maintains it while scheming and bartering for a more easeful life — a part played with conviction and affectingly by Mickey MacDonald — her husband who makes a poor living carving stone monuments for cemeteries, two sons, a resentful married daughter and a gaggle of resident characters.

Robert Warren as the poet son Eugene who longs for university and Jim Leard as the elder brother who simply wants to get away by means of a foreign war, perform competently as individuals without providing much sense of relationship.

Among a generally acceptable cast, Angela Henry is outstanding for a warmly sensitive portrait of Laura, the girl whose love finally frees Eugene from his mother's domination.

Classic dilemma faces municipal councils as sports clubs and parents demand better facilities— but how can it all be done in these inflationary times without an impossible drain on taxes?

Recreation: We're Playing for Big Money

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Municipal recreation in Greater Victoria is all things to all citizens.

It's the opportunity to skate, swim, curl, jog, golf, soak in sauna and swirlpool, get involved in ballroom dancing, Hatha Yoga, puppetry and a score of other pastimes, play tennis or simply stroll in the park.

It's the chance to meet one's friends and neighbors ("participate in social interaction," as the professionals might say), stave off middle-age spread and generally do one's own thing.

In the case of the city's Memorial Arena it's show biz — everything from ice spectaculars to hard rock — and professional sport which isn't always very sporting.

It's a situation in contrasts, with people flocking to the smart new recreation centres in Oak Bay and Esquimalt, but leaving Victoria's Crystal Pool almost a deserted mausoleum.

It's expensive, with gross operating costs of over $6.5 million a year and taxpayer subsidies of nearly $4 million in the four core municipalities.

And, not least, it's a steady source of controversy and argument.

On the one hand sports clubs, enthusiasts, parents of budding Bobby Orrs and residents who consider their recreation services inadequate demand more and better facilities.

On the other, hard-pressed taxpayers — notably the not-so-athletic elderly, who liken their situation to high-flying Otto Lang's user-pay concept of transportation: you pay, I use — view the soaring deficits with alarm.

Some of the more outspoken critics accuse municipal politicians of self-aggrandizement, bent on erecting monuments to their own financial folly.

By an ironic coincidence, the age of the shortened work week, more personal leisure time and stepped-up demand for publicly provided recreation also happens to be the age of frightening inflation.

Capital costs have a nasty habit of swelling grossly beyond early tentative estimates and — as happened recently in Oak Bay — elected representatives who once sold their proposals with predictions of modest operating costs find their naive underestimates returning to haunt them.

Item: Assuming a six-percent increase this year, a parks laborer in Saanich will earn a total of $16,492 in salary and fringe benefits. In 1958, when Saanich reported proudly that "a parks foreman was added to the staff, responsible to the engineer for the maintenance and operation of all municipal parks and recreation," total expenditure on parks maintenance was $16,936.

Item: Ten years ago a lifeguard employed by the city of Victoria earned $2.02 cents per hour. By 1970 that had risen to $2.66. Last year the lifeguard rate was $4.90.

With cost increases of that magnitude, municipal councils here as elsewhere are presented with a classic dilemma.

How to keep existing parks attractive and well maintained, and perhaps add to the parks system, without placing an impossible drain on taxes?

How to tread that fine line of reducing operating losses on pools and arenas by setting realistic admission rates, without making those rates so high that they drive away many of the residents for whom the centres were provided?

Such questions seem to have been around a long time, but in fact the history of recreation in Greater Victoria (using recreation in the term's broadest sense, as embracing far more than just parks, open spaces and playing fields) spans less than three decades and in most cases is less than 10 years old.

The grand-daddy and pioneer of the recreational monoliths was the Memorial Arena, built at a cost of little more than $1 million and opened Nov. 11, 1948.

For more than 12 years it was the only such building, until the $400,000 Esquimalt Sports Centre with its skating rink, curling rink and banquet hall arrived on the scene in 1961 amid an effusion of municipal pride.

Saanich entered big-league play rather late in the day, but quickly made up lost points.

Feeling the impact of rapid suburban growth in the mid-1960s the municipality awoke to the realization that its population needed more than roads, sewers, garbage collection and parks.

A consulting firm, A. B. Sanderson and Company, was commissioned to undertake a study of indoor recreation needs in Saanich. The firm's report, produced in late 1966, was adopted as the blueprint for a five-year expansion program.

SMITH

Oak Bay Bargain May End

Admission rates for the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, which Mayor Brian Smith describes as "one of the great bargains of the western world," may go up soon.

"As a new centre anxious to please I think we probably pegged some of our rates a little low," the mayor said.

Some of these may have to go up to reduce the taxpayer subsidy of roughly three mills on the centre's operating deficit.

"I think it (the deficit) can be reduced without turning away people and turning this into a rich man's club," Smith added.

In 1967 voters approved a comprehensive recreation bylaw for expenditure totalling $1,250,000. of which $950,000 was to be borrowed.

Then in quick succession Saanich residents greeted the $360,000 George R. Pearkes Arena (October 1968); the $150,000 Hampton Park senior citizens' centre (December 1968); the $514,000 Gordon Head Recreation Centre and pool (January, 1971); and the $350,000 Cedar Hill Community Centre (February 1973).

Victoria, meanwhile, was agonizing over what to do with the Crystal Garden building it had inherited from the CPR in 1965. Faced with an estimated $600,000 bill for a major overhaul of the long-neglected structure, the city council of the day finally decided to build a new pool.

In retrospect, the bitter controversy which surrounded both that decision and the choice of site — in Central Park — seems to have been a portent of things to come. But at the time the new Crystal opened in November, 1971, all was euphoria and the $1.8 million pool designed by architect John Di Castri was hailed as one of the finest in North America.

(It's worth noting that the Crystal Pool and another major asset, the McPherson Playhouse, were the generous bequests of a citizen, the late T. S. McPherson; and not the result of far-sighted fiscal planning by city fathers. Thus in recreation Victoria is free of the heavy debt burden borne by neighboring municipalities. The civic theatre's formal opening was in February, 1965).

Esquimalt, smallest municipality but proud of its pioneering in indoor recreation, added to its stable in December, 1974, with the opening of the new Esquimalt Recreation Centre across Bullen Park from the older sports centre.

Similar in some respects to Saanich's Gordon Head centre, although bigger and more lavish, the Esquimalt model combines 25-metre pool complete with sauna and whirlpool, meeting hall, banquet facilities and activity rooms.

Strangely, it was staid Oak Bay, long the starving outcast of Greater Victoria in regard to recreation, which ended up with unarguably the finest asset of all: the multi-purpose Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Opened with aquatic antics starring Mayor Brian Smith in October, 1975, the $3 million-plus centre houses in one attractive complex big and small pools, two saunas and jet whirlpool, ice rink, six sheets of curling ice and — to the vocal abhorrence of some — a licensed lounge.

Hot on its heels late last year followed Oak Bay's "bubble," the $500,000 four-court indoor tennis centre and only municipal operation of its kind in B.C.

The repercussions of Oak Bay's daring dalliance with the sporting life have been profound.

Internally, the rec. centre and the so-called Tennis Place (also known cynically in some quarters as Brian's Bubble after the municipality's tennis-loving mayor) have revolutionized the recreation scene in Oak Bay and given the lie to its stuffy tweed-curtain image.

Externally, it has helped plunge the Racquet Club into a financial crisis by siphoning off one-third of the private club's membership. And it has lured customers away from recreation facilities in other municipalities, making particularly savage inroads into attendance figures at the Crystal Pool.

The figures speak for themselves. In 1972, the Crystal's first full year of operation, public swimming sessions attracted 133,022 customers more than doubling the gate enjoyed by its venerable predecessor, the Crystal Garden.

Then began the remorseless downward progression. In 1973 attendance dropped to 130,214, in 1974 to 124,682, in 1975 to 81,923. The figure for 1976 (the Oak Bay centre's first year) was a dismal 74,651, a 44 per cent decrease on the Crystal Pool's peak year in 1972.

Budgeted revenue from public swimming at the Crystal Pool last year was $80,000; actual revenue a shade over $43,000.

The total budgeted operatisg loss was $98,013; actual loss $161,807.

Crystal Pool: from 133,022 users in 1972 to 74,651 in 1976, a 44% drop

Although depressed by such figures, Victoria aldermen apparently do not believe it's worth spending an estimated $80,000 or so to shine up the Crystal's bleary image by adding sauna, pulsating jets and all the rest.

A recent proposal to that effect was viewed skeptically with Mayor Mike Young noting there was no guarantee the costly extras would stimulate wider community use of the pool.

However, officials in both Oak Bay and Esquimalt seem to have little doubt that it is the additional amenities, 'offering low and middle-income citizens the opportunity to wallow in the hedonic style of the rich, which make their pools so attractive.

"We were designing without frills but we insisted on quality," says Esquimalt Ald. Ken Hill, who points out that senior citizens are among the most regular patrons of the sauna and hydro pool facilities.

The irony is that Victoria could have had such ancillary attractions, and at a much lower price than today's estimates, because the Crystal Pool's architect had included them in his original concept.

But the then council, determined to keep costs as low as possible deleted the proposals.

And until last month, when the $40,000 cost item received a tentative green light for the first time, subsequent councils had also consistently rejected the idea of installing electric timing in the pool—essential for the staging of major swim meets and championships.

Thus the five-year-old Crystal Pool has failed to achieve two of the most fundamental objectives outlined in the early planning process:

"To make the pool a 'fun place' where people will come because they really want to" and provide facilities for "competitive swimming to British Empire (sic) and Olympic competition standards."

By contrast with the Crystal's vast but thinly-populated vault, the more intimate scale of the Oak Bay centre and its manifest popularity leave the impression of a building humming with life and vitality.

Parks and recreation manager Duncan Russell says monthly attendance at the centre and the nearby tennis bubble is averaging about 90,000, mostly Oak Bay residents but customers also coming from as far afield as Colwood, Shawnigan and Lake Cowichan.

Says Mayor Smith: "I think it has been wildly successful in fulfilling the broad spectrum of community needs among all ages.

"The place is used from dawn till midnight. I was down there at 7:40 this morning (on a late-February day) and the pool was half-full, three courts were being used and there were people skating.

"The use is just fantastic."

All of which seems to bear out the observation four years ago by university professor Colin Campbell, in his comprehensive Greater Victoria Leisure System Study, that Oak Bay residents "have a voracious appetite for recreation."

But there's a price to pay for all this healthful exercise, fun and self-fulfilment.

As Oak Bay tots up the cost of its first full year as leader in the municipal recreation field, some citizens are having public twinges of unease about the imbalance of the balance sheets.

And at least one elected official of a neighboring municipality looks on the Oak Bay situation as a warning to the over-ambitious.

Ald. David Paterson, the Saanich recreation committee chairman and a chartered accountant, believes the "emotional" clamor for more and better recreational opportunities often drowns the voices of economic reason.

"So many people I know live in Saanich but are going to the Oak Bay rec centre and they think it's great," he says.

"But I laugh and I chuckle and I say, wait till you see the financial statement for that baby."

THURSDAY: The true cost of recreation.

Delay Asked On New Power

Premier Bennett will be asked to delay legislation boosting planning powers of the Islands Trust.

Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region Board, said today six of the seven regional districts affected by the change favored such an approach in a meeting at Nanaimo Tuesday. The representative of the seventh district was unable to attend.

Campbell said he will ask his board to support a resolution framed by the Nanaimo meeting and asking Premier Bennett to intercede and the government not to act on the legislation this session.

The changes if approved would strip planning authority for islands within the trust from the regional boards and pass it to the trust.

The most important objection to that change is that it would "disenfranchise" land controls by taking them from elected regional directors and passing them to trust committees where a majority are government appointees, Campbell said.

New Medical Alert Aids Offer a Bit Of Eye Appeal as a Selling Feature

What was that old saying about necessity being the mother of invention?

Well, Bob Lombard doesn't know if it was "necessity" exactly that started him thinking. But he did see a need. And now, after a lifetime in the construction industry (and two heart attacks), Bob is embarking on a curious venture.

"My brother is allergic to penicillin but no one knows and it nearly killed him once when they shot him full of the stuff," Lombard explains. "And my mother is a diabetic — but she just won't wear one of those big ugly bracelets."

Those big ugly bracelets are the kind supplied by the world-wide non-profit organization Medic Alert. They are identified by that name on one side and carry whatever type of illness you may suffer from on the other. That's so in the event of an accident, first aid or medical people will know what special kind of treatment you require.

Medic Alert is non-profit but it's non-glamor, too, says Bob.

"It costs something like $10 to join and for that you get a cardboard card that rapidly disintegrates and a bracelet," he says. "The concept of Medic Alert is good but their product is so damn ugly, not everyone will wear it and they should."

And so, after months and months of research, special designs by Victoria commercial designer Peter Thornton-Trump and "literally thousands of hours spent making thousands of changes," Bob Lombard and his manager Lettie Larson have launched their company Emergency Medical Alert Aids.

"In no way is it my idea to cut them (Medic Alert) down because they're doing a fine job," Bob points out. "But we feel we can offer a much nicer product at the same cost."

So there you have it. A Medic Alert type of operation on a commercial basis and

Bob says it's an entirely new thing and to the best of his knowledge there's nothing like it anywhere in North America.

Operating temporarily from a shabby pink apartment building at 339 Island Highway (opposite the Fort Victoria Motel), Lombard, Mrs. Larson and a young secretary are sending small display stands out to doctors in the area. By Friday, all doctors in Greater Victoria should have one of the displays which show a sample of the identification cards and provide application forms to fill in. Within the next few weeks the operation will have been expanded to take in all doctors in Canada and Bob says he's considering approaching drug stores, too.

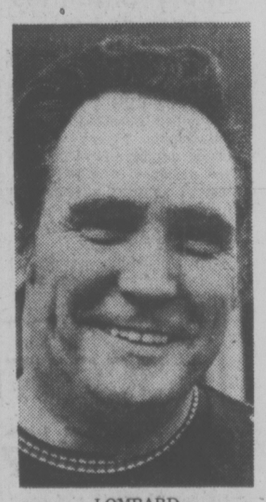
There is no joining fee for Emergency Medical Alert. You simply pay for whatever of the aids you desire.

It's $3 for the attractive red, white and gold card and it's enclosed in plastic and so, says Bob, will last a lifetime. The cards have spaces for your name, address and phone number, your date of birth, blood type, the particular kind of illness you may have, whether you are allergic to anything, your occupation and your social insurance number. On the back there's a place for your doctor's name and phone number and any emergency treatment you should be given.

The other aids include a neat bracelet with engraving at $7.95, a fashionable triangular pendant hung from a fine gold chain and bearing the words Medical Alert also at $7.95, suit or dress pins at $2.95, embroidered crests (for things like children's sweaters) at $1.95 and car decals at a quarter each.

Bob says doctors don't have to endorse his products but merely allow his display stand to be put in their office or waiting rooms. He has already sounded out a few of the doctors at random and says all the response has been positive.

"From doctors' figures we believe there are at least 650,000 Canadians who need these bracelets and cards," says Bob. "We're confident we'll have about a quarter of a million people under this project in the first 12 months."



LOMBARD
. . . new venture

A lot of epileptics or diabetics are embarrassed with their problem and don't want anyone to know about it when as many people as possible should know, Lombard says.

"We feel that by offering people a product that is attractive and desirable, we can help eliminate this embarrassment, this stigma."

Thief's Slip Was Showing

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A sloppy smash-and-grab thief at the University of Victoria Tuesday escaped with nothing but political aspirations.

He also made the mistake of dropping a slip of paper with his name, address and telephone number.

The end result is the election for president of the Alma Mater Society is up in the air for the second time in less than a month.

In the latest incident, about 30 minutes before polls closed, a man smashed a window in the MacLaurin building, roughed up poll workers and grabbed the ballot box.

He ran from the building, jumped into a car and was driven off by two accomplices, the ballot box clutched firmly in hand.

Unfortunately for him, he had dropped a slip of paper, which turned out to be his resume bearing his name, address and phone number.

Student officials, campus security police and Oak Bay municipal police tracked the man down. So far no one has been able to come up with the ballot box.

If the ballot box is found, and appears not to have been tampered with, candidates Brian Gardiner and Douglas Anderson can decide if they wish the ballots to be counted and the election declared valid.

No ballots from any of the polling stations have been counted at this time.

At the Feb. 16 election, two polling stations ran out of ballots shortly before polls closed.

The election was declared invalid after it was decided several students may have been disenfranchised and only two votes separated Anderson and Gardiner.

A second election was called and held Tuesday.

Stars Have That Feeling As Victory String Grows

By The Canadian Press

The playoffs have already started for Minnesota North Stars, even though the National Hockey League regular season still has three weeks to run.

"We're playing what I like to think of as playoff hockey right now," said rookie Minnesota right winger Glen Sharpley. "I think the guys smell pay dirt."

Charged with enthusiasm about reaching post-season play, the North Stars have won their last three games, moved into third place and pulled four points ahead of Colorado Rockies in the Smythe Division.

In other games Tuesday night, Pittsburgh Penguins beat St. Louis Blues 2-1, Boston Bruins edged Atlanta Flames 3-2 and Los Angeles Kings thrashed Chicago Black Hawks 7-1.

Goaltender Pete LoPresti has won the last five games he's played for the North Stars.

He stopped 32 shots Tuesday night while his North Stars mates made the best of the 18 they took on New York goalie Glenn Resch. Rookie Jim Roberts, Ernie Hicke and Sharpley collected the Minnesota goals while the Islanders' Billy Harris ruined LoPresti's shutout bid with 1:51 remaining.

Harris's goal was the only bright spot of the evening for New York, which has lost two of its last three games and is running out of hope of catching the first-place Philadelphia Flyers in the Patrick Division.

Jean Pronovost and Wayne Bianchin scored goals two minutes apart in the opening period, lifting Pittsburgh past the Blues.

The victory, Pittsburgh's second over the Blues in three meetings, featured near-flawless goaltending by the Penguins' Dunc Wilson, who kicked out 37 shots, including 17 in the second period.

Rick Middleton battled two Atlanta defenders in the crease to jam the key goal past Dan Bouchard in the third period and lift Boston past the Flames.

The win, Boston's fifth in a row, moved the Bruins to within a point of first-place Buffalo in the Adams Division. The Sabres have played one less game.

Tommy Williams scored his 30th and 31st goals in the second period and Los Angeles converted four power-play goals in five chances as the Kings crushed the Black Hawks.

Marcel Dionne and Butch Goring each chipped in with three assists in the rout of the Black Hawks, the first time the Kings had beaten Chicago in three meetings.

NHL ALTERS FORMULA FOR JUNIOR PAYMENTS

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Hockey League board of governors Tuesday revised the method of determining compensation for the players who are drafted and have been drafted from junior hockey and set May 31 as the date for the annual draft of overage juniors.

From here on, the junior team from whom a player is drafted receives $1,000 as an immediate claiming fee, $4,000 when the player signs and $5,000 when and if the player appears in 40 games in the NHL over a three-year — instead of the previous two-year — period. This makes a junior team eligible for a possible $10,000 maximum for a drafted player who makes the NHL within three years. The board said payments will commence from the date of the signing of the player.

The move will mainly benefit the three major junior leagues in Canada — the Ontario Hockey Association, major junior series, Quebec Junior Hockey League and Western Canada Hockey League.

ARMY CALLS SKI CHAMP

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — World champion slalom skier Ingemar Stenmark will have to complete his 7½ months military training like any other Swedish national servicemen, military authorities have confirmed.

Stenmark had hoped to continue ski training abroad this summer.

Vinthers Is Lone Skip On Northcott Route

MONTREAL (CP) — Nobody has gone undefeated in the Canadian men's curling championship since Ron Northcott's rink from Alberta went 10-0 in 1969, and only Roy Vinthers of British Columbia has a chance this year.

The Vancouver skip had a 5-0 won-lost record after two draws Tuesday and led second-place Jim Ursel of Quebec and John Usackis of Manitoba, both at 4-1, by a game.

The fifth consecutive Vinthers victory came by a 10-3 score over Paul Savage's Ontario rink from Toronto.

In other action, Newfoundland's Wayne Hamilton of St. John's trounced the Prince Edward Island rink of Charlottetown's Ken McDonald 11-0, Don Twa of Whitehorse and the Territories downed Nova Scotia's Halifax rink skipped by Bob Fitzner 9-3 and Edmonton's Tom Reed led Alberta to a 10-2 triumph over Roly Mockler's New Brunswick rink from Fredericton. The only close decision was an 8-6 verdict for Usackis' Lac du Bonnet rink representing Manitoba over Saskatchewan's Les Rogers of Regina.

"With the ice being the way it is, you'll pretty well always get lopsided scores the way they are today," said Vinthers as the curlers discussed the warm conditions in the Velodrome.

Ice-makers complained that the temperature inside the building was pushing up the relative humidity and the ice was considerably less than ideal.

In that sixth draw, Alberta dumped Ursel 8-7 in an extra end to hand the Montreal rink its first loss, while B.C. whipped Saskatchewan 12-5, Sudbury's Rusty Tate of Northern Ontario beat Newfoundland 8-4, Manitoba edged Saskatchewan 11-10 in 12 ends and Ontario turned back the Territories 8-3.

Alberta and Ontario were tied for fourth place with 3-2 records, while the Territories had a 3-3 mark. Northern Ontario, Newfoundland and New Brunswick were 2-3 and Saskatchewan 2-4. Next at 1-4 was Nova Scotia and P.E.I. was winless in five games.

Savage said he was hampered by the ice conditions.

"I've always had trouble on heavy ice, and the ice was a little heavier this afternoon, and that was it. What happened was I didn't play very good, as is indicated by the scoreboard. I don't think any of us had an exceptionally good game."

Newfoundland's shutout over P.E.I. stopped after eight ends. The record low score for a completed 12-end game is one, on three occasions, but that mark was not comparable because the game ended because the regulation length of games has been reduced to 10 from 12 ends.

In eighth-draw play starting at 2 p.m. EST today, B.C. met Manitoba, Quebec played Newfoundland, Ontario opposed Nova Scotia, Alberta faced P.E.I. and Northern Ontario played New Brunswick. The Territories and Saskatchewan had byes.

Monarch Rally Sparked By Over-Age Returnee

By The Canadian Press

A forward who returned to the Western Canada Hockey League when the Eastern League folded was a big factor Tuesday night as Winnipeg Monarchs rallied to tie Saskatoon Blades 6-6 in a WCHL game.

Gord Blumenschein scored twice in the first period to help the Monarchs overcome an early 3-0 deficit. Blumenschein was signed by Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association after graduating last season and was shipped to Baltimore Blades.

When the Blades and the league folded, Blumenschein returned to Winnipeg as an overage junior.

The hard-fought contest, marked by 33 minor penalties and six majors, left Saskatoon second in the Eastern Division and Winnipeg second in the Central Division.

Medicine Hat Tigers stretched their Central Division lead to three points by defeating Flin Flon Bombers 4-2. New Westminster Bruins pounded Calgary Centennials 8-5 in the other game.

Tom Roulston also scored twice for the Monarchs while Kevin McCarthy and Jim Malazdrewicz shared the others. Bill MacNaught had two goals for Saskatoon while Wes George, Wayne Fennell, Darryl Erickson and Mel Hewitt shared the others.

Ron Areshenkoff scored two goals, his 49th and 50th, to lead Medicine Hat, while John Hilworth and Dan Lomas also connected. Lomas hit an empty net in the final minute for the insurance goal. Jordy Douglas and Dennis Baumgartner had the Flin Flon goals.

Stan Smyl paced New Westminster—which leads the Western Division by 26 points—with a pair of goals. Singles were scored by Doug Dirksen, Bruce Andres, Don Hobbins, Mark Lofthouse, Brad Maxwell and Ray Creasy.

LEOS GET UCLA COACH

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have announced the signing of Max McCartney, defensive-co-ordinator for the University of California, as the Lions' assistant coach.

Head-coach Vic Rapp said Tuesday that McCartney, 40, will be responsible for the defensive line as well as the linebackers.

Before moving to the University of California at Berkeley in 1972, McCartney was defensive co-ordinator at Stanford University, McCartney was with Stanford for its 1971 Rose Bowl victory over Michigan and its 1972 Rose Bowl win over Ohio State.

He began his coaching career at San Diego State in 1957 and played college football at Whittier, where he was coached by George Allen, now of the Washington Redskins.

Quick Answer Required

QUEBEC (CP) — John Dacres, president of Quebec Nordiques, says that if there is a merger between the National Hockey League and World Hockey Associaiton, the arrangements should be made within two or three weeks.

"We have to know by the spring exactly what we will be doing for next season," the WHA team president said.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said in New York Monday night that a fact-finding committee is expected to have a report within a few weeks on the validity of any accommodation between the NHL and WHA.

However the fact-finders appointed by the NHL governors are not empowered to discuss merger in their contacts with the WHA, Campbell added.

Two WHA club presidents — Bill DeWitt of Cincinnati Stingers and Harold Baldwin met with NHL people Monday in New York and Dacres said the two men had been designated as official spokesmen for the other owners.

Dacres said he had heard that it will cost $2 million for each WHA club and there would also have to be some indemnification paid.

"It would be a lot of money and a decision would have to be made as to whether it would be better to use the money to consolidate the franchise in the WHA. We would have to know what the NHL would give us for our $2 million."

Injury Sidelines Flyer Goaltender

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Goaltender Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers will be out of action for at least a week because of a left knee strain, says the National Hockey League team's doctor.

Dr. Joe Torg, the Flyers' orthopedic consultant, said Parent will be idle seven to 10 days after straining the knee in a workout.

Big Crowd At Opening

HIALEAH, Fla. (AP) — With 16-year-old riding star Steve Cauthen the big attraction, Hialeah opened its 53-day meeting Tuesday with a crowd of 22,002. Cauthen won on one of seven mounts but got dumped at the gate by Noble Madame prior to the $31,250 Jasmine Stakes.

The last time Hialeah opened on a Tuesday with the late-season dates, in 1974, attendance was 12,359 and the mutuel handle was $1,440,579. Tuesday's handle was $1,897,929.

Rose-Red Talks Blocked on Cash

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Negotiations between veteran third-baseman Pete Rose and Cincinnati Reds remained deadlocked Tuesday after the latest meeting between both sides.

"We met for more than an hour, but there just isn't any progress to report," said Dick Wagner, general manager of the National League baseball team.

Rose, who has threatened to play out his option, declined comment, saying, "it seems like every time I say something I get in trouble."

Wagner said the Reds were willing to give Rose a contract for two to three years, but the salary is the chief stumbling block.

Rose is one of five unsigned Reds who Wagner hopes to have under contract before today. That is the date that major league clubs can automatically renew contracts of unsigned players. If a six-year veteran refuses to sign, he can play out his option and sell himself to another club at the end of the season. Wagner said he remains confident that the five will reach terms with the Reds to avoid the option issue.

SCOTTISH SOCCER STAR AMONG GUEST SPEAKERS

Graham Leggat, a former soccer star who represented Scotland 25 times in international matches, has confirmed his appearance as a guest speaker at the 10th annual Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner.

Other guests at the dinner, which is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Saanich and the Greater Victoria Sports Council, include football kicking star Dave Cutler, hydroplane driving champion Bill Muncey and hockey personality Howie Meeker. One other speaker is expected to confirm his appearance later this week.

Leading athletes and the top team in the Victoria area, along with persons who have made outstanding contributions to sports, will be honored at the dinner, from which proceeds will again go to aid Kiwanis charities. It will be held next Monday at the Empresss Hotel.

After starting his 17-year professional soccer career with Aberdeen in the Scottish League, Leggat later played in Britain with Fulham, Birmingham City and Rotherham United. In approximately 560 league matches, he scored 275 goals.

Leggat coached the Rotherham and Aston Villa clubs before moving to Canada in 1971 to help launch Toronto Metros in the North American Soccer League.

He joined Carling - O'Keefe in a public relations position after his contract as player-coach with the Metros was terminated at the end of two seasons and he is now general manager of the O'Keefe Sports Foundation.

Suspension Suit Filed

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves and owner Ted Turner filed a lawsuit in U.S. district court Tuesday seeking an injunction lifting baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn's one-year suspension of Turner.

The suit also asks that the loss of a first-round choice in the baseball draft be overturned, but it seeks no damages.

The Braves had announced last week that a suit would be filed.

Kuhn suspended Turner for one year because of a cocktail party remark by Turner to another owner that he would top any offer by the National League rival San Francisco Giants to retain free agent outfielder Gary Matthews.

The Braves eventually signed Matthews, now with the team at West Palm Beach, Fla. Kuhn also took away Atlanta's first-round selection in the draft.

"I had heard they were going to do that," said Matthews at the West Palm Beach training camp. "That doesn't concern me really. I mean, I'm here. This is between the Braves and the commissioner. I just hope everything works out for Ted."

Matthews insists that he has done nothing wrong.

"If I had done anything wrong, I'm sure the commissioner would have nullified my contract," he said.

Broncos Deal For Morton

DENVER (AP) — Veteran quarterback Craig Morton of New York Giants has been traded to Denver Broncos for Steve Ramsey and "future considerations," a spokesman for the National Football League's Broncos has announced.

Morton, 34, is a 13-year NFL veteran. He spent the first 10 years with Dallas Cowboys before moving to the Giants for a first-round draft choice.

Ramsey, 29, who started the first 12 games for Denver last year, spent six seasons as a Bronco.

Amalgamated Project Another Pioneer Effort

Amalgamated Conservation Society members appear to be pioneering yet another facet of low-cost but efficient enhancement of our salmonid resources.

Early last week, volunteers stripped three female steelhead, fertilized the eggs with milt from four males and then planted the eggs in two specially constructed redds in the Goldstream side channel which was rehabilitated for salmon spawning and rearing by the ACS in 1975.

All the steelhead were prime fish and were taken by conventional angling. One more female is being held to ripen and ACS hopes to get some more males for additional plantings.

Fry from the 6,815 steelhead eggs are expected to emerge this spring along with fry from 15 coho salmon redds created by the fish in the channel last fall.

Dr. David Narver, the co-ordinator of anadromous fisheries for the provincial fish and wildlife branch, has said a modest production figure has been set for steelhead under the federal-provincial salmonid enhancement program.

The target of adding 105,000 more fish to the average annual catch will simply "recoup steelhead losses incurred through the harvest of intermingling salmon and steelhead stocks, especially in the Fraser River system."

Area production targets are 30,000 for the west coast of Vancouver Island, 51,000 for the Fraser River, 18,200 for the Georgia and Johnstone Strait areas and 4,770 for the north and central coastal regions.

Techniques favored by provincial authorities for enhancing steelhead include the use of incubation boxes and natural rearing facilities such as those now employed for coho by the ACS in Goldstream and the Sooke Conservation Society in Mary Vine and DeMamiel creeks.

Another course of action, which is in line with steelheaders' concern that the natural stocks be maintained, is the removal of stream barriers or construction of fishways to open up previously unavailable habitat.

Both steelhead and sea-run cutthroat trout will be under intense scrutiny during the early stages of enhancement to increase the relatively meagre knowledge of each species.

Where there is no alternative to hatcheries and enhancement is desired, steelhead production will likely be incorporated into the chinook and coho facilities.

An enhancement program spokesman said:

"A program of applied research and experimental pilot projects, to test new approaches and produce fish and knowledge simultaneously, will be carried out for steelhead and cutthroat trout as well as for the salmon species. Studies aimed at sorting out the problems of intermingling stocks have high priority."

Near-natural techniques such as fry feeding and habitat improvement have been employed for six years by the ACS and their pioneer work indicates fish production in small streams can be increased two to four times at low cost.

In 1976, incubation boxes produced over 73,000 fry during the spring. The Mary Vine Creek box yielded 38,611 fry for a 92 per cent egg-to-fry survival rate and the Goldstream box produced 35,130 fry at an 89 per cent rate.

This past fall, despite low spawning escapements coming from a year in which the fry were unfed (1974) because of too low a population, a total of 109,000 eggs were planted in the boxes: 80,000 in two boxes at Mary Vine and 29,000 at Goldstream.

The eggs have already hatched and the egg cases have come to the top of the gravel. The fry should emerge between mid-March and early April, depending on water temperatures.

The potential production of Goldstream is impressive.

Beginning this fall, the estimate is for an average production of 40,000 fry, producing 4,000 adult coho and a return of 1,000 spawners each year.

Preliminary cost estimates for operations are 24 cents per coho with a mixture of volunteer and paid help and 53 cents with all-paid help.

Aside from the incubation box and the side channel improvement in the Goldstream, ACS volunteers have been busy during the past year constructing pools in other channels that are dry in the summer to provide fry with low water-velocity winter habitat.

Another improvement has been the construction of several low rock dams to provide greater water depths and lower velocities for growing fry.

ACS has been busy feeding in DeMamiel Creek and, to a lesser extent, Tugwell Creek. The society has also maintained its incubation box program.

Perhaps the most ambitious endeavour, however, was completion of a dam on the upper part of DeMamiel Creek which will improve the marginal flows of water in two and a half miles of stream above Young Lake and increase low flows for four miles below the lake.

Both conservation organizations and the various government agencies supplying input to the projects deserve a great deal of credit for getting on with the job rather than merely complaining about the problem.

HEAVY FINE FOR FIGHTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Any player who engages in a fight during a National Basketball Association (NBA) game now faces a fine of up to $10,000 as well as a suspension, says an amendment to the NBA rules adopted by the board of governors.

Larry O'Brien, NBA commissioner, said a flurry of fights between players in recent weeks point up the need for stiffer penalties for offenders.

WHITEHEAD AN AZTEC

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Aztecs of the North American Soccer League have announced the signing of their No. 1 draft choice, Ken Whitehead, a forward from Simon Fraser University. Whitehead also was a member of the 1976 Canadian Olympic team.

It Was a Real Show

By The Canadian Press

Real Cloutier of Quebec Nordiques put on a show for the home folks Tuesday night and set a World Hockey Association record in the process.

Cloutier, the 20-year-old right winger who scored 60 goals last season, picked up three more Tuesday night to run his season total to 53 and lead the Nordiques to a 9-2 win over Phoenix Roadrunners at the Quebec Coliseum.

It was Cloutier's seventh three-goal game of the season, breaking the previous record of six held by both Danny Lawson of the old Philadelphia Blazers and Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets.

Lawson, now with Calgary Cowboys, had six three-goal games in the 1972-73 season while scoring 61 goals and Hull achieved the same feat in the 1974-75 season while scoring 77.

In other games Tuesday night, Winnipeg Jets beat San Diego Mariners 5-0 and Houston Aeros downed Edmonton Oilers 5-3.

Cloutier, who has 13 career three-goal games, has scored only two of his seven this season at home. Statistics for the last five WHA seasons show that two-thirds of the players achieving three-goal games do so at home.

On Tuesday night, the St. Emile, Que., native scored his first of the night to give the Nordiques a 3-0 lead mid-way through the opening period. He scored his second late in the middle period to put the Nordiques up 4-2, then added his 53rd of the season at 2:16 of the third period.

At Winnipeg, the Jets' top line of Bobby Hull, Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg was back together for the first time in six weeks and responded with three goals.

The line was on the ice for less than a minute before Hedberg scored his 55th goal of the season. Hull scored his sixth before the period ended and Nilsson got his 31st in the third.

Hull, Nilsson and Hedberg formed one of hockey's top offensive lines for the last two years but injuries had kept them apart for most of this season. Even when the three have been healthy, coach Bobby Kromm has often separated them in an effort to produce a more balanced scoring attack.

They were together Tuesday night for the first time since Jan. 21 when Hull suffered a cut tendon in his foot.

Terry Ruskowski's third-period goal broke a 3-3 tie to lift Houston past the Oilers after Edmonton had taken a 3-0 lead.

Tigers, Jewels Favored

Vancouver Island-champion Victoria High Tigers and Salmon Arm Jewels are rated as the teams to beat in the British Columbia high school girls' basketball championship which opens today at Penticton.

Tigers, who won the provincial crown in 1975, are seeking a third straight berth in the championship final. Last year, Tigers lost out to Jewels in the final.

The Salmon Arm team, which has won eight B.C. titles, topped Tigers in a tournament at the Interior city earlier this season.

Reynolds Roadrunners, another Island representative, are making their fifth appearance in the provincial playoffs and will field a solid contender. Roadrunners beat Tigers in the Lower Island championship.

Teams have been divided into four divisions for preliminary round-robin play with the top two teams from each division advancing to the championship playoffs. Victoria has been drawn in with L. V. Rogers of Trail, Kamloops and Carson Graham while Reynolds is in with Prince Rupert, Richmond and Abbotsford. Nanaimo, the last Island rep, is in with Templeton, Monnonite Educational Institute and Quesnel while Salmon Arm is grouped with Cranbrook, Chilliwack and Point Grey.

The tourney is scheduled to finish Saturday.

Athletics Roll Into Hoop Final

Bert Zethof fired 24 points Tuesday night to lead Victoria Athletics to a 77-63 voctory over Little Giant Bakeries and a sweep in their best-of-three Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League semi-final playoff series.

Jim MacKay added 18 points for Athletics in the contest at Lambrick Park Schol while Ken Weins and Bob Vanderford canned 16 points each for Bakers.

Athletics and Oak Bay will now meet in the best-of-three final for the fifth straight year, starting at 8:30 p.m. Monday at Victoria High School.

Rally Team Breaks Up

TURIN, Italy (AP) — The world auto rally champion team of Sandro Munari and Silvio Maiga of Italy is breaking up and one reported reason is political differences. Munari, the driver, is a Chrstian Democrat and Maiga is a Maoist.

Their latest triumph was in the Monte Carlo rally. Team sources said they quarrelled there and decided to part because of that. But they added that relations between the wo had always been formal.

Battering Drops

EDMONTON (CP)—Reported cases of child battering declined by one-third in Alberta during 1976 but provincial government officials can give no definite explanation for the drop. The department of social services and community health said its child protection registry received 237 reports of child battering in 1976 compared with 369 reports in 1975. The 237 reports involved 285 youngsters.

Braves Take Playoff Title

Braves dropped Esquimalt Legion 6-3 before about 1,000 fans to take the best-of-seven series, 4-1.

Ed Beauchemin led the Braves with three goals, Ron Jobson scored twice and Brent Patterson added the other goal. Murray Allen, John Entzminger and Steve Buckley replied for Esquimalt.

The goaltending chores were fairly even with Brock Davis making 41 saves for Esquimalt and Mike Duch blocking 37 shots for Saanich.

Braves now have a 10-day layoff while waiting to play the North Island champion in the best-of-three Island playoff March 18-20 at Pearkes Arena.

Clinic for Coaches Slated at Esquimalt

Hockey officials from the district and provincial levels will serve as instructors when the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association conducts a level II coaches clinic Sunday at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The clinic, open to all coaches in the Greater Victoria area presently holding level I certification, will start at 10 a.m. and wind up at 7 p.m.

Topics to be covered include coaching philosophy, teaching techniques, skating, puck control, team play theory, goaltending and training techniques.

GARDEN TAKEOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Gulf and Western Industries Inc., the largest stockholder in Madison Square Garden, has announced plans to buy the entire New York City sports facility for about $29 million.

Gulf and Western, which owns 39 per cent of the Garden, or 1.877 million shares, said it would pay $10 a share for the remaining 2.9 million shares of the Garden's common stock.

"I can't speak for the board of directors, but personally, I think that's a fair price," said Alan Cohen, president of Madison Square Garden Corp. "It's a question of value for our stockholders."

The Garden's stock was selling at $9.75 a share Monday, up from $5 Friday.

The Garden, home of the National Hoickey League's New York Rangers and the National Hockey League's tion's New York Knicks, has lost money every year since its opening in 1968 at its present site on West 33rd Street in Manhattan.

FM-CLOSED CIRCUIT AUDIO SERVICES ON CABLE TELEVISION

The Commission's Cable Television Regulations and Policies issued on November 26, 1975, and December 16, 1975, respectively, required that closed circuit audio services not authorized by the Commission for carriage by cable television licensees be discontinued.

Due to the fact that this policy affected many existing closed circuit audio services involving ethnic and student programming which had been carried for some time, the Commission subsequently issued a public announcement on March 24, 1976, which allowed for an extension to March 1, 1977, of the time required for compliance with this policy.

This decision was taken to allow further time to find alternative ways of providing the services currently carried which would establish the operators as licensees of the Commission. In its announcement of March 24, 1976, the Commission stated that it was prepared to consider a new concept, a community audio F.M. channel similar to the community video channel, to provide an access facility for community groups, especially ethnic and student groups. Cable television licensees were then invited to apply to establish such a channel.

To this date only two applications have been received from cable television licensees to establish such a channel and only one licensee has suggested alternative ways of continuing the closed circuit audio services affected by the Commission's Cable Television Policy of December 16, 1975.

The Commission has, however, had discussion with several representatives of the operators currently providing closed circuit audio ethnic programs who have recommended that the Commission consider licensing them to operate these services using SCMO facilities. This would permit special interest groups to broadcast to the public using a portion of the channel assigned to a conventional FM broadcasting station. Such transmission would be receivable only on specially-equipped radio receivers.

There are a number of fundamental questions which must be investigated before a decision can be taken as to the practicality of using SCMO facilities, such as the types of services involved, nature of the programming, responsibility of the licensee, conditions of licensing and the availability of suitable receivers.

In order to give the necessary time to assess the feasibility of this and other possible solutions, the Commission has decided to further extend the time within which compliance with its December 16, 1975, Cable Television Policy is required, to March 1, 1978.

Secretary General.

YVAN COURNOYER

Cournoyer Sidelined

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvan Cournoyer, right-winger with Montreal Canadiens, was admitted to Montreal General Hospital Tuesday afternoon, the club announced. Claude Mouton, team spokesman, said Cournoyer had experienced pain in his right leg during the last two weeks and the team decided to hospitalize the veteran for what is thought to be a pinched nerve in the back. Cournoyer will miss Canadiens' games against the Maple Leafs in Toronto tonight and Colorado Rockies in Montreal March 10.

Southampton Falls

MANCHESTER (Reuter) — Southampton finally lost the English Football Association Cup when they went down 2-1 to Manchester United, the team they beat in last year's final, in a fifth-round replay at Old Trafford Tuesday night.

Two goals by Jimmy Greenhoff were enough to sink Southampton, which played the last 29 minutes with only 10 men after defender Jim Steele was sent off for a tackle on Greenhoff.

Steele was playing his first game since finishing a three-match suspension.

United took the lead in the fifth minute. Lou Macari headed a corner from Sammy McIlroy to Greenhoff, who had a simple task nodding the ball home from two yards.

Southampton, which drew the first leg 2-2 in Southampton 10 days ago, equalized in the 36th minute when referee Clive Thomas awarded a disputed penalty for a foul by Martin Buchan on Steve Williams. Defender David Peasch converted from the spot.

Another touch of the Macari magic gave Greenhoff the opportunity to hit home his second in the 68th minute, although he got a deflection off a defender.

United now meet Aston Villa in the quarter-finals.

John's Jumper a Great One

By The Associated Press

John Drew knows a good thing when he sees one. And he is not bashful when it comes to telling the world about it.

"I think I made a great shot," said the young forward of Atlanta Hawks, whose 30-foot jumper at the buzzer beat Philadelphia '76ers 99-98 in a National Basketball Association game Tuesday night.

"I'm not cocky or conceited," said Drew, who led the Hawks with 30 points, "but they had me covered well."

Drew credited the capacity crowd of 15,821 at the Omni in Atlanta—only the second sellout in the Hawks' five years there— with an assist on his winning basket.

Elsewhere, Detroit Pistons nipped Milwaukee Bucks 109-107, Buffalo Braves beat Portland Trail Blazers 102-95, Denver Nuggets defeated New York Knicks 114-108, San Antonio Spurs topped Phoenix Suns 122-115, Seattle SuperSonics beat New Orleans Jazz 96-91 and Golden State Warriors downed Cleveland Cavaliers 112-102.

Atlanta, trailing 90-82, ran off nine successive points and took a 91-90 lead. Philadelphia then went ahead 98-97 on two free throws by George McGinnis with nine seconds remaining.

That paved the way for Drew, whose basket lifted Atlanta out of the Central Division cellar, putting the Hawks one-half game ahead of New Orleans.

McGinnis led Philadelphia with 32 points.

Ralph Simpson topped Detroit with 20 points.

Adrian Dantley and Don Adams scored 10 points apiece in the fourth quarter as Buffalo snapped a four-game homecourt losing streak. Dantley finished with 29 points.

Denver overcame an early 44-20 deficit and beat the Knicks behind the second-half scoring of David Thompson, who had 26 of his 30 points after intermission.

Seattle led by 20 points in the second quarter but had to withstand a Jazz rally which cut the deficit to one point in the final two minutes. Fred Brown scored 25 points and Slick Watts and Nick Weatherspoon 23 apiece for the Sonics.

THREE-REFEREE SYSTEM MUST COME

NEW YORK (AP) — A third referee is needed for National Basketball Association games, says John Nucatola, supervisor of officials for the NBA.

"It will have to come," Nucatola said. "You need a third official out there to keep track of everything.

"The players and the coaches have become more sophisticated, but we're trying to officiate with the same four eyes we had 30 years ago."

The NBA studied the three-official idea in pre-season games some years ago and also in a number of college conferences, and Nucatola said the system worked fine.

"People were afraid there would be too many fouls called, but instead there were less fouls," he said "There was less whistle-blowing and the games were smoother. The players liked it, the coaches liked it, the general managers liked it."

But the NBA still uses two officials per game. How come?

Money. "It came to a final vote of the board of governors," said Nucatola, "and it didn't go through. But it will come up again."

And when it does, the governors—taking note of recent controversies concerning fights between players, zone-type defences and the increase in home team winning percentages—may decide it's worth the money to try the third official once again.

"If we had a third official, he could watch for that zone defence," said Nucatola, who was a charter official back in the 1940s when the league was called the Basketball Association of America. "With two officials, there's just so much to watch."

LEE TREVINO

Pain Replaces Fun on Fairways for Lee Trevino

By BOB GREEN

MIAMI (AP) — The old familiar swagger is gone. The non-stop chatter has stopped. The broad, expansive gestures are subdued, blurred and indistinct.

Lee Trevino moves more slowly now. He avoids bending and stooping wherever possible, often directing his caddy to pick the ball out of the cup. He no longer paces the fairways impatiently between shots, swinging his arms, shrugging his husky shoulders, talking, joking, laughing.

Now he usually sits quietly on his golf bag, often with his shoulders slumped and his head hanging.

Oh, there are occasional flashes of the old, familiar, onstage Trevino. Waiting to hit his approach shot on the 72nd hole at Rio Pinar last week in the Citrus Open, he was pacing back and forth, talking to the gallery, waiting for the group ahead to finish play.

"Lord," he said to the gallery, "I wish they'd hurry. Ive got to go to the bathroom.

But that's unusual these days. And this brash and brassy guy who has added so much to the joy of the game has to work at it.

A grey-faced look of anguished fatigue has replaced the constant, infectious grin.

He no longer looks at a leaderboard and asks: "Who do I have to beat? Now the question is: "Do you think 145 will make the cut?

"I think he came back too soon," said a close friend and travelling companion. "I tried to talk him out of it. Everybody that's close to him tried to talk him out of it. How many times have you seen somebody try to come back too soon and then hurt themselves beyond repair?

"He just got so antsy at home that he couldn't stand it — and nobody could stand him. He just had to get back out here."

"The back's okay," he replies, brushing off questions impatiently, almost brusquely.

But the weariness is evident. There's obvious pain in his effort to play 18 holes. He has nothing left for the hours and hours of practice that once characterized his game.

"I have no power in my back, no power in my legs," he said. "I just don't have any power at all anymore.

His problem was illustrated on a par three hole last week. His playing partners hit seven irons to the green. Trevino was short with a four iron.

"Ive got to try it for a while," he said. "I've got to work at it.

He's playing the next two weeks, then will take at least one week off, maybe more.

"When we start moving north it's gonna be cold," he said. "You know how it can be at Hilton Head and Greensboro. And the cold just kills me. Kills me. I can't move.

"That's why I wanted to try to come back here in Florida," he said. "I've always played good here, and the heat is good for me. I thought this would be the best place to try it."

Koch Jumps Into Sixth On Cash List

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Koch, not even among the season's top 100 money winners prior to last Sunday, moved into sixth place on the list with his victory in the Florida Citrus Open, the Professional Golfers' Association has announced.

Koch took home the $40,000 top prize in the Orlando, Fla., tournament. In six previous outings, Koch had won $1,485. He also earned 100 Spring Tour points and is tied for first with Jack Nicklaus.

There were no changes among the top five money winners, none of whom played in Orlando. Bruce Lietzke remains first with $123,350, followed by Tom Watson, $98,635; Nicklaus, $54,600; Rik Massengale, $51,378, and Tom Purtzer, $46,112.

The Bridge Expert

One of the time-honored myths believed in by the broad masses of bridge players has been the presumed infallibility of bridge experts. This myth is on its way to extinction, having been negated by "facts."

The reason behind its coming demise is that experience has demonstrated that experts are mere mortals — they make errors at the bridge table, even as you and I. Admittedly, they make them less frequently than we do, and they own a warehouse of enormous talents. But, at times, they are quite capable of committing enormous "goofs."

As an example, observe today's deal, which came up in the 1956 European Championships. Sitting North and South, respectively, were Pietro Forquet and Guglielmo Siniscalso, of the World Champion Italian Blue Team. They were playing against one of Europe's strongest pairs, Pierre Jais and Roger Trezel, of France.

East made a poor call when he doubled North's seven-spade contract. Had he not doubled, Forquet would surely have gone down, since he could not have been so clairvoyant that he would have taken a first-round finesse against East's guarded jack of trumps. But, with the double, Forquet would have been a shoo-in to fulfill the grand slam, since he would have assumed that East was doubling on a potential trump trick.

But Siniscalso, in the South seat, felt that East, for his double, had a sure trump trick. Siniscalso, of course, realized that Forquet, for his seven-spade bid, could win the opening lead in the adversely bid heart suit. However, it probably never dawned on him that Forquet was void of hearts—he thought that North had the heart ace.

So Siniscalco retreated to seven notrump, banking on his solid club suit to bring home the contract. As is evident, he miscalculated. When the smoke had cleared, the defenders had taken the first six tricks in hearts, inflicting an 1,100-point set on North-South. Nevertheless, the Italian team, undaunted by this catastrophe, won the match and the championship.

"That's right, just the four of us," said Ken. "My wife and I, and our Tony, and my sister Ann. A great little family."

Bob nodded. "It sure is, but how old is the boy?"

"Figure it out," Ken replied. "His age added to Ann's makes my wife's age, but my age is my wife's added to his. Then his age and mine total the same as my wife's and Ann's, and all four add up to a hundred."

What were the ages?

Matsqui Convicts Won't Get Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — In a 5-4 decision announced Tuesday the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that an appeal by two prisoners at the Matsqui Institution 40 miles east of Vancouver against a decision by the prison's disciplinary board did not have to be heard judicially.

In rendering the majority verdict, Mr. Justice Jouis-Pilippe Pigeon said the regulations under which the board remrimanded prisoners Robert Thomas Martineau and Robert Earl Butters are not statutes having the force of law but are only administrative directives for members of the board to follow.

The ruling upheld an earlier decision by the Federal Court of Appeal not to hear an appeal against the disciplinary board on the grounds that the court was not required to act in matters not having the force of law.

The rights of the prisoners were affected, Pigeon said, but this "does not mean that whenever the decision affects the right of the applicant, there is a duty to act judicially."

TEEN TRIAL DELAYED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The sentencing of a 16-year-old boy found guilty in juvenile court Feb. 10 of the slaying of a 10-year-old girl has been postponed for the fifth time.

The boy now is to be sentenced March 15.

The prosecutors' department first said juvenile court authorities were having difficulty in placing the boy, therefore the delays in sentencing were necessary.

Prosecutors Tuesday refused to give any reason for further delays in sentencing saying, "it would be improper to talk about a juvenile before sentence is imposed."

Identity of a juvenile cannot be published, neither can court proceedings leading to the conviction.

In Court as a Woman, Jailed as a Man

VANCOUVER (CP) — Donna Delorme, 23, pleaded guilty as a woman, but is jailed as a man.

Delorme is held in the west wing of the men's section in the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty in B.C. Supreme Court Monday on a charge of manslaughter.

Delorme, who formerly went by the name Dwayne, is said to be part way through a sex change and was handled as a woman by court authorities since being charged last August with the death of Hung Suy Louis Yuen.

All prisoners at Oakalla get a medical examination when they are brought to the Burnaby prison and at that time the doctors decides where to send anyone of "confused" gender, Henry Bjarnason, director of the men's section, said Tuesday.

Bjarnason didn't say exactly how the doctor decides, but Robert Burns, director of the women's section made it clear that they do just a simple visual examination.

So Delorme is held in a cell in the west wing at Oakalla, and that means he is a man, Bjarnason said, adding there are several other prisoners who though men, dress and act as women.

Bjarnason and Burns were asked if such prisoners present any particular problems.

Burns: "They're a goddamned nuisance. The men are curious and, well, I guess they have other interests too."

Bjarnasorr: "They're not so much a problem as the fact that the other inmates will abuse them because they appear to be women."

Burns said the prison has few facilities for segregating the men - women and agred they get a rough time at the institution.

Delorme's lawyer, Paul Meyers, said his client has not completed the sex change.

Delorme pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter laid in the death of Yuen, who was injured in a street scuffle July 27, 1976, and died in August.

Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson, who heard the plea, remanded Delorme to March 29 for sentencing after ordering a presentence report at the request of Meyers.

Oldest Pills Worth A Dinner

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials at Lions Gate Hospital want residents here to turn in their old pills and they are offering a free dinner for two as an incentive.

The hospital is holding a contest from March 30 to 26 in an attempt to persuade people to clear their medicine chests of outdated prescription and non-prescription drugs.

The meal at a local restaurant goes to the North or West Vancouver resident who turns in the greatest number of, and oldest, drug containers and contents.

Hospital authorities are particularly worried about the danger the pills pose to children.

Shirley Pruden of the hospital's pharmacy department said hospital authorities read of a pharmacist in the United States who offered incentives for the return of old pills.

"We thought it a good idea, so decided to give it a try," she said.

Pruden said residents are to put their old pills and bottles in a bag, with a note giving name, address and telephone number, and leave the bag at one of four depots.

FARM LABORERS JOIN OIL UNION

VANCOUVER (CP — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board announced that it has granted trade union certification to a group of farm workers at South Peace Farms in the Peace River district.

The precedent-setting decision gives certification for the 16 farm workers to be represented by the Oil, Chemical, Atomic Workers' International Union (OCAWU). The decision was unanimously approved by a board panel made up of John Baigent, vice-chairman, Arnold Smith and Clare Alcott.

The 38,000-acre South Peace Farms is a joint venture of two United States firms. About 10,000 acres are occupied by tenant farmers who were not involved in the application. The rest of the acreage is a cattle and mixed cereal grain operation.

Farm workers were included as employees under the labor code by the former New Democratic Party administration in 1975 and this was the first certification bid to come before the board.

The employer contested the application on the grounds that the OCAWU was not an appropriate union to represent the workers, that union representation was not suitable for the employees involved, and that the board did not have the jurisdiction to hear the application.

The board held that ". . . there is every reason to believe that the OCAWU is particularly well qualified to represent the employees of South Peace Farm."

"The local's membership consists of approximately 110 members of a nearby refinery that draws its work force from the surrounding community. That community is an agricultural community.

Man Cleared

VANCOUVER (CP) — The parents of a young man accused of murder almost broke down in British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday when the jury returned a verdict of not guilty after seven hours deliberation. The jury was confined to a downtown hotel overnight and returned the verdict of acquittal shortly after resuming deliberations in the case of Larry Grey, 21, of Seattle.

Israeli Cabinet Facing Major Shake-Up at Polls

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Political alliances that have been practically unchanged in Israel's 28-year history are expected to be shaken up in general elections May 17.

The elections have been called early by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin after a cabinet crisis in mid-December.

The crisis followed a showdown precipitated by Rabin against the National Religious Party (NRP) which has traditionally provided the ruling Labor party with the few extra seat that gave it a majority in the Knesset (parliament.)

The NRP and other smaller religious groups traditionally poll between 10 and 15 per cent of the Israeli electorate.

In exchange for promise not to interfere with Jewish religious laws, Labor has been able to push nearly all its legislation through the Knesset.

Faced with the question of laying down lines for a possible final peace settlement with the Arab states, Labor now will have to do without religious support since there are marked differences between Labor and the religious groups on the peace issue.

Rabin has been saying increasingly that Israel is ready to make widespread territorial concessions in return for real peace.

This means Israel probably will offer to hand back most of the territories it occupied during the 1967 war in exchange for some sort of peace document from the Arab states.

The handing back of land, however, is anathema to the religious groups since the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River is considered by them to be part of "Eretz Israel" the land of Israel, which they consider was promised by God to Abraham as stated in the Bible.

Most of biblical Israel's history, in fact, took place in what are today Arrab-inhabited areas rather than within the pre-1967 borders of the Jewish state.

The religious groups note that the names of the Arab-inhabited villages of the region are nearly all modifications of original Hebrew names. Scores of holy sites are located on the West Bank.

Rabin seems resigned to the fact that he sill have to face bitter opposition from the tightly knit and powerful religious community the day he orders the Israeli flag pulled down over these places.

The 54-year-old premier hopes new elections will give him a clear majority of at least enough strength to permit him to govern with the support of various small left-wing groups.

The showdown with the religious groups provided a typical example of how the religious community reacts when it feels basic Jewish law is transgressed.

The religious ministers in Rabin's cabinet refused to back him in a censure motion prompted by the arrival of new American warplanes for Israel at a public ceremony which ended about 15 minutes before the start of the Jewish sabbath.

The religious groups said the hour at which the ceremony took place meant that those attending were forced to drive home after the start of the sabbath, thereby transgressing religious principles.

Most Israelis drive on the sabbath and ignore other religious prescriptions but the religious groups believe that to let such transgressions take place openly in an official capacity would loosen their hold over religious questions in Israel.

The religious groups turn a blind eye to the widespread eating of pork as long as it is sold under the name "white" meat and do not protest against occasional El Al flights on Saturdays as long as they are not listed officially.

But their hold is such that Israelis are deprived of public transport from sundown Friday for 24 hours. The only exception to this rule is in Haifa where religious groups wield little power.

And all matters concerning marriage, divorce, birth and death are controlled strictly by religious laws.

Rabin is not expected to challenge the religious groups on these issues, which many non-religious Israelis oppose bitterly.

He probably will be busy enough during the election campaign fighting off religious attacks on the territorial issue.

Previously, the main attacks on this question were expected from the right-wing Likud opposition. But Likud leader Menachem Begin has suggested that his group is ready for land concessions in exchange for peace.

Rabin received grudging support from his own party when it gave him a narrow victory over Defence Minister Shimon Peres in a leadership contest Feb. 23.

The hawkish defence minister had strong support from many of the party rank-and-file who complain that the prime minister lacks leadership qualities.

Another obstacle for Labor is a spate of financial scandals affecting Israeli politics which led to the recent suicide of Housing Minister Avraham Ofer, who was accused of misdealings in the Knesset.

Accusations by Knesset members were reproduced widely in the Israeli press. They mainly centred on the alleged channelling of public or trade union funds into Labor party coffers.

An upsurge in Palestinian guerrilla attacks against Israelis here and abroad also might force Rabin to change his relatively dovish line.

But even though Israeli leaders are intent on negotiating peace, their position is still far from those of their Arab counterparts and even of their American allies.

Privately, Israeli officials say, Egypt and Syria finally have come to terms with the existence of Israel on the map of the Middle East. But both these Arab countries are adamant supporters of a Palestinian state between Israel and Jordan.

The Israelis oppose such a project, which probably would mean that Arab troops again would be based close to Israeli towns.

The nightmare of the Israeli generals would be a return to the pre-June, 1967, borders when Israel at its narrowest point measured less than 12 miles from the Jordanian border to the Mediterranean.

High government sources say Israel eventually would look more favorably on a joint Jordanian-Palestinian state which included most of the West Bank now occupied by Israel—as long as the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) was not represented in its government.

The Israelis appear to be pinning their hopes on changing attitudes among Arab rulers toward the PLO.

They also hope a more "moderate" leadership will emerge from the Palestinian community in the West Bank, although elections there have indicated the contrary.

Israelis say a Palestinian state linked to Jordan would be heavily dependent on the U.S. while a totally independent Palestinian entity rapidly would become a Soviet stronghold.

Senate Misled by Warnke—Jackson

By SPENCER RICH
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D — Wash.) Tuesday accused Paul Warnke of "deceit", misepresentation and attempts to "mislead the Senate" on the eve of today's U.S. Senate vote on Warnke's appointment as U.S. disarmament negotiator and advisor.

Debate was strident and hharsh. Jackson attacked Warnke for allegedlyy doctoring a 1972 document and attempting to blame it on his typist. Warnke defender Edward M. Kennedy (D — Mass.) called Jackson's motives for opposing Warnke, as described in one newspaper article as "irresponsible and reprehensible" and "a new low", if true. At the same time, Barry Goldwatter (R—Ariz.) raked over President Carter not only for the Warnke appointment but for his Africa policy, his economic policy and his arms policy in general.

Opposition to Warnke is based on fears that Warnke, in negotiating an arms treaty, will give too much away to the Soviets, allowing them to gain a miliarty advantage over the U.S. Many senators consider his past positions too "soft."

Jackson denied a newspaper story which said, in effect, that he was deliberately attempting to drum up a big Senate vote against Warnke, so that, even if he were confirmed as expected, he would be weakened by the show of no-confidence so much that eventually President Carter would have to replace him with a "stronger" man. Jacksos wasn't present at the time of Kennedy's remarks and didn't respond to them

Kennedy, Edmund Muskie (D—Maine), George McGovern (D — S.D.) and Thomas Eagleton (D — Mo.) accused Warnke critics of opposing hims because they actually oppose arms limitations.

In a brief statement delivered calmly and without personal attack, Senate armed services committee chairman John Stennis (D — Miss.) said he will vote against Warnke both as disarmament negotiator and as head of the arms control and disarmament agency, because Warnke's past position against development of new weapons would weaken "his ability to carry on negotiations and bring back a treaty that can be accepted."

Imports Hurt U.S. TV Industry

WASHINGTON (WP) — The International Trade Commission ruled unanimously Tuesday that imports are seriously damaging the U.S. domestic color television industry and will recommend to President Carter on Thursday ways to protect the industry.

American consumers spend about $2 billion a year on color televisions. Imported sets, which accounted for 17.9 per cent of sales in 1975, climbed to 42 per cent last year.

Lobbyists for domestic manufacturers and unions said they were pleased with the 6 to 0 vote Tuesday and say they will be "very disappointed" if the commission recommends anything less than import quotas to Carter.

Four of the six commissioners found that color television imports — mostly from Japan but also from Taiwan and South Korea as well as other countries — are seriously hurting the industry today and the other two found that imports were a "threat" to the industry in the future.

CARTER TALKS PLEASE RABIN

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has ended talks with President Carter apparently satisfied that the special relationship between the two countries will continue under the new administration.

The president told Rabin on Tuesday that he will fulfil a commitment made by then-president Ford to supply Israel with an unspecified number of F-16 fighter planes.

Israeli sources said Rabin was pleased with the rapport he established with Carter and felt in some ways it exceeded his personal ties with Ford.

Carter devoted unusual attention to Rabin, adding two unscheduled meetings to the original program for a total of four hours of talks in addition to a working dinner.

Rabin found support for the Israeli view that there can be no dealings with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) until it recognizes Israel's right to exist and changes its basic covenant to that effect, Israeli sources said.

They also said Carter backed Israel's view that peace talks must be aimed at reaching an over-all settlement and not just an end to the state of war or other partial solutions.

TRAIN MOTORMAN NOT INFLUENCED BY POT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Laboratory tests show motorman Steven Martin was not under the influence of marijuana during the Feb. 4 elevated train crash in Chicago that killed 11 persons and injured nearly 200 others, a federal agency says.

Kay Bailey, vice-chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said Tuesday urine samples taken from Martin 1½ hours after four Chicago Transit Authority train cars plunged from elevated tracks in the Loop "revealed no evidence of metabolized marijuana."

Miss Bailey will serve as chairman of a March 16 public hearing in Chicago into the crash and Martin will be among the witnesses.

The urine tests were conducted by the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington and by the Triangular Research Institute of the town of Research Triangle Park, N.C.

Juice Price To Climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. consumers will pay about one-third more for orange juice because of the freeze damage to Florida citrus groves in January, the agriculture department said today.

If the freeze had not damaged the crop, the price of a six-ounce can of frozen concentrated orange juice probably would have dropped to 25 cents from last season's average store price of 28.7 cents a can, officials said.

As it is, the department said the retail price of a can of frozen concentrate will probably average 33 cents a six-ounce can during 1976-77.

Officials said, however, that the price forecast is preliminary and that if actual orange crop production is even smaller than indicated now, the retail cost of a can of juice might go as high as 40 cents.

House Passage For Tax Rebate

WASHINGTON (UP) — The House Tuesday passed its version of President Carter's tax cut bill to pep up the lagging U.S. economy — legislation to mail out $50-per-person rebate and special-benefit cheques this spring and summer to more than 90 per cent of the population.

The bill would also lower the taxes of two-thirds of all taxpayers who do not itemize their deducations, by raising the so-called standard deduction.

The legislation now goes to the Senate, where the finance committee began hearings Tuesday morning, and where a number of changes are likely.

The House approved the tax bill 292 to 131 after narrowly rejecting a Republican alternative 219 to 194.

The bill calls for rebates on the 1976 taxes that will be due in full on the 15th of next month. The rebates would generally be $50 per person covered by each tax return; thus a family of four would get $200.

But the size of the rebate would be scaled down for taxpayers with incomes between $25,000 and $30,000, so that those with incomes of $27,500, for example, would get only $25 per person, and those with incomes over $30,000 would get nothing.

Another major provision would give $50-per-person payments to most of the non-taxpaying segments of the population that would not be reached through the rebate.

Power Cut By Kaiser

SPOKANE (AP) — Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Co. will further reduce the aluminum capacity of its plants at Tacoma and the Spokane Mead works to reduce power consumption, a spokesman says.

The cutbacks will reduce electrical consumption by about 20,000 kilowatts, spokesman Joe Piedmont said.

Limits Expanded In Senate Code

WASHINGTON (WP) — The proposed new U.S. Senate code of official conduct, being drafted by a special committee, will bar members and top staffers from also working for pay as lawyers, insurance or real estate agents, physicians, architects and other "professional services."

The curb on professional income began originally as a flat prohibition against members and staffers who are lawyers earning $23,000 or more from practising in addition to their senate business. It was subsequently expanded to include other professions and goes beyond any provision in the House ethics package.

As does the House code, the Senate proposal calls for extensive public disclosure of all permitted income, investment holdings and gifts.

The Senate drafters, however, put into their package a series of rules not contained in the House code:

—Former senators are barred for one year from lobbying their former colleagues or Senate staffers on behalf of a client. The same one-year lobbying prohibition applies to committee staffers and Senate aides.

—The income disclosure provisions, applicable to senators, are made enforceable on individuals who announce themselves as candidates for a Senate seat. Under the code, such an individual would have to make public his income for the prior year at the time he announces for the Senate.

—The outside income limitation of 15 per cent is applied to Senate staffers earning $35,000 per year or more. Such an individual is permitted to accept speaking honoraria of up to $300 per speech and a total of $1,500 per year.

—Senators are permitted honoraria of up to $1,000 per speech, although the total is subject to the yearly earned outside income limitation of about $8,600, or 15 per cent of a senator's annual salary of $57,500.

Fixing a Superb Beef Stew Is a Great and Noble Art

tiny bennett

The great and noble art of making a beef stew seems to have gone by the board in recent years. And with the emphasis placed on gourmet dishes one gets the idea that a beef stew is about the last thing one would serve to guests.

I disagree with this on the basis that it is one of my favorite dishes and I'm well aware that people really appreciate one that is properly made right from scratch.

Making a stew from the ground up, so to speak, is not just fussy cooking, but the best way to get the full flavor of the dish and also to keep costs down at the same time. I hate these recipes that suggest you use a can of this and a can of that and the only exception I make in this is that I do use a can of tomatoes. But whenever possible, they are my home-canned tomatoes.

The meat ingredients for a top quality stew come in two parts, bone and coarse beef to make the broth, and an inexpensive cut such as a blade, crossrib or similar pieces that needs slow simmering in liquid to render it tender.

A full two days before I plane to cook the stew I wander along the meat counter picking up a pack of beef marrow bones, and any cheap packs of boney, fatty pieces of beef sold at a few cents a pound.

Back home these are placed in a baking tin and well-browned in a 375 oven, turning from time to time. The cooking period is not exacting in any way, but the meats and the bones must be well browned if you want to get a nice colored broth.

When done, drain off any fat, put into a large stew pot, cover with a large quantity of cold water and bringing slowly to the boil, simmer for three hours. Now add one small peeled onion, one cleaned and broken up carrot and a cleaned and broken stick of celery and simmer very slowly for a further three hours. Strain into large vessel, discard the used vegetables and when cool put in the fridge, or in a very cool place covered overnight.

In the morning take the bowl of broth and skim every piece of fat from the top — it will have congealed into a thick layer that's easy to handle.

Now cut up a blade or similar cut of beef into one-inch squares, removing all fat, and put it into the pot and bring to the slow simmer.

Now it is vegetable cutting time and there's almost no end to what you can use. The one point I like to make is that it makes a better tasting and far more attractive dish if the vegetables are chopped up into a similar-sized dice. In fact my daughter Tracy complains if the carrots are too large, even though she loves carrots.

For my stews I slice the largest Spanish onion I can find into fine slivers, two cleaned, crisp stalks of celery, three medium carrots, one small yellow turnip and add a pack each of frozen lima beans and green beans. Then in goes one tablespoon pearl barley, one tablespoon brown lentils, and one cup of dried white beans that have been brought up to the boil and allowed to sit covered for one hour — this process saves long soaking.

Finally, I pour in one can of plum-style tomatoes, stir and begin to work out the seasoning.

Season with one tablespoon salt, six whole black peppers, ½ teaspoon thyme, one teaspoon dried oregano and the same of dried parsley and stir it all well in.

The true secret of obtaining a rich and tasty beef stew lies in using the correct ingredients and cooking it all at the slowest simmer for hours on end. And to thicken it, one hour before the end of cooking time I add three potatoes peeled and diced.

Since all the fat was skimmed off the broth and the fat on the stew piece was discarded there shouldn't be any fat at all on top of this stew, but if you have allowed some to slip in, skim this from the surface as you stir the stew from time to time. But I would suggest that you very carefully eliminate the fat when you cut up the meat.

The addition of the potatoes will have lowered the saltiness of the dish, so 20 minutes before the stew is ready for serving taste it and add any necessary seasoning — it may need more salt, but that's about all. The blending of the food, herbs and spices should suffice.

In my home I serve this as a one pot dish since there are so many good vegetables and legumes in the pot, but a great favorite is to make a pot of potatoes and when properly cooked, add a knob of butter, a little milk, and pound it all into rich, creamy mashed potatoes. Use a proper potato masher and when the milk and butter have been added pound again with the masher and then whip until no lumps are left.

Another very popular side 'dish' to this stew is crusty bread such as the French or Italian loaf, simply heated for a while in a 375 oven in a brown bag and served with fresh butter or margarine.

A stew made in this way doesn't take up much time even though it cooks for a very long time indeed, so it is a boon for the stuck-for-time homemaker. And don't be self-conscious of serving on a special occasion, because I've found that my friends accept it as a treat.

If you've made a huge pot . . . as I always do . . . it can be freshened up with some more vegetables for dinner the following day, or it can be frozen in a proper carton or container to make a really quick dinner at a later date.

There is no better fare during this miserable weather and it is a blessing to the household budget at this time when inexpensive cuts of beef are plentiful and selling at rock bottom prices.

Use Straight Arm On Those Buzzards

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman who is taking over a prosperous family business started by my grandfather. This is a small town, and my grandfather formed some valuable business relationships with men who are still very important to the success of our business.

The problem is that these "gentlemen" find me quite attractive. So much, in fact, that I have found myself backed up against the wall, hugged, squeezed and generally mauled by these kindly old buzzards, while they keep reminding me that they've been good customers for over four decades.

If these men were my age, I could handle them, but they're all over 65, and trying single-handedly (and sometimes double-handedly) to close the generation gap.

Is there a way to keep this business (and myself) on our feet?—EDGY

DEAR EDGY: If you're a good businesswoman, you'll keep the business on its feet without tolerating passes from lecherous grandfather types. It may take the technique of an O. J. Simpson or a Tony Dorsett on broken-field running, but that, plus a good straight-arm (and, if necessary, some straight talk) is all you need.

DEAR ABBY: When a guy asks me to dance, how can I turn him down without hurting his feelings? I'm 16, if that makes any difference. Thank you. — CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: Say, "Thanks, but I think you'd be more interesting to talk to. Shall we sit it out?" (P.S. Then you'd better have something to talk about, even if it's only a string of questions to keep the conversation moving.)

DEAR ABBY: Right now I am so upset I want to get this off my chest to relieve my own anxiety, and if you print it in your column it will be a big favor to many women.

I am in my eighth month with my first child, and today I had a checkup. Coming home on the bus, I sat next to a motherly-looking woman who struck up a conversation with me. She talked about nothing but the horrors of childbirth!

She had had six and lost two. Her sister had a child who was born deaf and blind, and her daughter's first child was retarded because of the long and complicated labor she had endured. Then her neighbor's baby strangled on the umbilical cord during the birth process. Abby, by the time I got off that bus I was shaking like a leaf!

Please tell well-meaning (?) women that pregnant women do not want to hear such tales, and if they can't say something cheerful about childbirth to not say anything at all. — UPSET

DEAR UPSET: You've said it all. And very well. Let's hope it gives those bearers of bad tidings cause to pause.

Orange walnut squares—packed with nutrition

By MARY MOORE

On my kitchen table were three fresh products from the oven: Lundy's Luscious Carrot Cake, Cecile's Lemon Squares and Orange Walnut Bars. Frankly these were tempters, for Wyn and Bev were coming and I wanted opinions. The Orange Walnut Bars won by a small margin and I was glad for they are still another health item to add to our growing file.

PEANUT MOLASSES BRITTLE

2 cups sugar
½ cup molasses
½ cup water
⅓ cup butter plus butter for greasing a slab or baking sheet
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 cups blanched, roasted peanuts.

1. Combine the sugar, molasses and water in a saucepan and cook, stirring, until the sugar dissolves. Continue cooking over low heat until the temperature of 300 degrees is reached on a candy thermometer. Or test a few drops of syrup in cold water. It should be very brittle.

2. Remove the saucepan from the heat. Stir in the ⅓ cup butter and beat in the soda. Add the peanuts and mix well. If the peanuts have been salted remove the excess salt before adding them to the mixture.

3. Pour the mixture out onto a well-buttered slab or baking sheet. Smooth it over with a spatula. Mark the candy in squares, if desired. In any case, loosen the candy from the baking sheet while it is still warm. When cold, break it into squares or into irregular pieces.

Yield: About 1¾ pounds.

ORANGE WALNUT BARS

Base:
½ c. butter or margarine
1 4-oz. pkg. white cream cheese
⅔ c. brown sugar, packed
1 c. whole wheat flour
⅔ c. wheat germ

Topping:
2 eggs
½ c. liquid honey
⅓ c. whole wheat flour
⅓ c. skim milk powder
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. cinnamon
½ c. grated orange or tangerine rind (blender is excellent for this).

To make base into beater bowl measure the butter or margarine, cheese, brown sugar, 1 c. whole wheat flour and wheat germ. Beat until you have a dough the consistency of firm shortbread. With dampened finger tips press evenly into greased 9x13" pan. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 6 minutes. Remove from oven.

Meanwhile to prepare topping in unwashed bowl (in which you have just made the base) beat the eggs, honey, ⅓ cup whole wheat flour, skim milk powder, salt, cinnamon and grated orange or tangerine rind.

As soon as base has baked 6 minutes pour topping over evenly and return to oven and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 12 minutes. Watch it! Do not overbake for this will burn easily. Cool in pan. Cut in squares to serve. A great snack for the children after school.

Salmon Salad Platter

1 (15½ oz.) can salmon
1 (6 oz.) can pitted ripe olives
2 lbs. potatoes
½ cup sliced green onions
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
Tarragon Dressing (below)
Ruffly lettuce
1 large tomato, cut into wedges
1 avocado, peeled and cut into 6 wedges
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Refrigerate salmon. Drain ripe olives; reserve 12 for garnish and slice remaining olives. Cook potatoes in boiling, salted water until tender. Cool slightly. Peel and slice crosswise into ¼-inch rounds. Gently toss potatoes with sliced ripe olives, green onion, parsley and ⅔ cup Tarragon Dressing. Drain salmon and break into chunks.

Arrange salmon and potato salad on lettuce-lined platter. Garnish with alternating wedges of tomato and avocado, sliced hard-cooked egg, and whole ripe olives. Serve remaining dressing on the side. Makes 6 servings.

Tarragon Dressing:

Combine 1 cup olive oil, ⅓ cup tarragon wine vinegar, 1½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard and ¼ teaspoon tarragon. Makes 1⅓ cups dressing.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: I love houseplants but do not have the best of luck with them. I think my biggest problem is knowing when to water them. Do the water sticks advertised in novelty catalogues really work? Also, I quit fertilizing in the fall. When can I use plant food again? Thank you. — W.P.

Dear W.P.: We have always been advocates of having personal relationships with your houseplants. This includes watering them by using the water stick (your finger) that comes on the end of your hand rather than a metallic or other kind of store-bought gimmick. Each plant is an individual and should be watered when its own particular need comes up.

Some plants, such aluminum plants, African violets, so forth, need water much more frequently than philodendrons, cacti, pothos, sansevieria, all succulents, and so forth. The best method is to experiment by watering those plants that need most water when they feel just barely moist to the touch, the others, when they feel dry.

Obviously, plants that are in sunnier spots will need more water than plants in darker corners. Also, plants in plastic pots will need less watering than those in clay, and those without drainage holes less than any.

Remember, more plants die from overwatering than under, so don't be afraid to let the watering go a day or two longer than you might instictively feel is right. As for feeding, start around the first of March and continue on a once-a-month basis through the summer.

MSG Reaction Common

eating right

It seems that reactions to Monosodium Glutamate are more common than you'd think. We've had letters from so many readers who wrote us to share their experiences with MSG describing a wide variety of conditions resulting from having eaten a wide variety of foods.

One reader described in excruciating detail "the terrible pain at the temples" she felt as if there was a vise around her head.

Another reader related all the symptoms of the "Chinese Restaurant Syndrome" to eating steak and Italian foods "only in restaurants, never at home." She further experienced violent and immediate attacks of diarrhea, and wondered if these were also caused by MSG.

We are not aware of any reports of diarrhea in response to MSG. Vomitting and nausea have been reported by some, which suggest stomach disturbances. What's obvious from reports in the scientific literature is that some people are senstive to MSG. Not everyone is affected by it. but those who are, should recognize the symptoms in themselves.

The answer is simple: if you are sensitive to MSG, avoid foods that have it. This means care in reading the ingredient lists on the labels. If you read labels, we admit it's difficult to find foods without MSG.

MSG, we found, is even in dog food, but if you persist, there are still some simple foods to be found without it. In restaurants: avoid soups, stews. meats served with gravy and dishes with sauces. Above all, give up shaking "Accent" (pure MSG) or pouring soy sauce on your food.

The symptoms include: sensation of tightness in the back of the neck, feeling of pressure behind the eyes, headache in the front of the head and at the temples, sleepiness, facial flushing, sweating, nausea, thirst, pressure and burning sensation in the chest and abdominal pain. These symptoms appear within about an hour of eating a meal rich in MSG and persist for hours thereafter.

Dear Ruth and Zak:.

I am giving my year-old baby fluoride drops. I have heard that when they are given in milk, they are not absorbed efficiently. Is this true and when is the best time to give them? — M.J.A., Victoria.

Dear M.J.A.:

Fluoride drops may be given in milk You should, however, check with your pediatrician or dentist regarding the advisability of givin your baby fluoride drops, in case that the formula or the local water supply contain enough fluoride. Of course, if you are breast-feeding your baby and there is enough fluoride in your diet, you may not need to give additional fluoride drops. So, check first with the municipality for the amount of fluoride in your water supply and then discuss wours and your baby's needs with your doctor.

Dear Ruth and Zak:

Is pasturized honey less nutritious than uncooked and unprocess honey? And. is brown sugar pure, unprocessed sugar? — L.K., Hampstead, Quebec.

Dear L.K.:

There is little or no difference in the nutritional value of pasteurized and unpasteurized honey. Supposedly, the unpasteurized honey has a higher bacterial count than the pasteurized one. Since the concentration of sugar is so high in honey, it is not likely that many bacteria would grow in it. However, it is a safe precaution in case the conditions in the plant processing the honey from the hives are not hygenic.

Brown sugar is the same as white sugar, only it has a coloring caramel or molasses added to make it brown. Raw sugar is at times sold in health food stores, but often contains much filth and debris as to make it undesirable. especially when it is not any better than white or brown sugar nutritionally.

Day-Night Handbags

NEW YORK (CP) — handbags that work well with day schedules that run into evening events take on every proportion from the classic clutch to Fantasy blossoms. A slice of ivory karung snake folds into a neat clutch that looks right with evening pyjamas as well as day dresses at Jay Herbert, New York. The newest way to carry spring blossoms is to have them attached to a bois de chine wrist bag.

BEEFALOAVES A CHANGE

BEEFALOAVES

1½ pounds thin sliced beef for sandwich steaks
1½ pounds ground lean beef
1 egg cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon salt, pepper as desired
½ teaspoon oregano
⅛ cup grated Parmesan cheese, if desired

Combine the ground beef with the following ingredients as you would for meat loaf. Form into small loaves, 8 or 10, or as desired. Wrap each loaf in 1 or 2 slices off the sandwich steak. Experiment with this to work as neatly as possible. Fasten with 1 or 2 toothpicks per loaf, keeping count to remove the same number before serving. Chill loaves for an hour for best results. Brown quickly in cooking oil, then arrange in baking dish to finish cooking in oven.

Vary your basting sauce according to personal preference. A small can of tomato sauce is good or substitute a cup of consomme or bouillon.

Bake at 350 degrees for an hour, basting or turning as needed.

Beef Still Holds No. 1 Spot Among Consumers . . .

Beef is a way of good eating for many Westerners. It still reigns supreme among meats preferred and bought by consumers.

There are approximately 1,600 commercial cattle ranches in British Columbia. An average cow-calf operation runs 180 breeding cows and consists of 600 acres of deeded land. Of this land, 120 acres is irrigated alfalfa hay, 20 acres is irrigated pasture and the balance of 460 acres is open rangeland. The ranch could also hold a grazing permit for 200 head between May and September. Total cattle in B.C. numbered about 686,000 (including beef cows, beef heifers, over one-year steers and under one-year calves).

Total "return to producer" income for 1975 was 50 million dollars. A lot of people and time are involved in beef production.

On an average, it takes about 2½ years to prepare beef for the consumer. From conception to consumption, beef passes through many different hands — rancher, feeder, veterinarian, banker or credit institution, packer, transportation (both rail and truck), retailer, to name a few, all of which are directly involved at some stage. Annual per capita consumption was about 110 pounds of beef in 1976.

To get the best value for your food dollar, take time to know your product. Learn to recognize the various cuts of beef. Don't be afraid to ask if unfamiliar with a cut, or how to use it. Buy what it best for your needs. While tender cuts are always good sellers, less expensive meats can be as flavourful with a little more care and attention. How to serve beef? Roasted, broiled, braised, barbecued or fried, the choice is yours.

Use only good quality beef for freezing. Prepare meat in cuts of weight and size to suit your family's requirements. Trim off bones and excess fat to save on freezer space. Use the recommended freezer wrap only, being careful to exclude as much air as possible when packaging. Be sure to re-wrap all pre-packaged meats. Separate prepared steaks, patties and similar meats by placing pieces of foil freezer wrapping or waxed paper between layers for easy separation while still frozen. Label each package with meat type, cut, date and weight. Freeze as quickly as possible at 0 degrees F. or below.

For best results, thaw frozen meat, then cook as you would for fresh meat. Keep in the freezer wrapping while thawing to prevent the evaporation of juices. The thawing times vary depending on shape, size and thickness of meat. For each pound allow approximately 12 hours in the refrigerator or 2 or 3 hours at room temperature. Use the meat as quickly as possible once it has been thawed. Do not refreeze meat unless ice crystals are still present.

. . . Especially in These Forms

FIVE STAR CHILI

1 lb. ground beef
1 clove garlic, crushed
1½ cups sliced onions, separated into rings
1 cup celery, cut on bias
1 green pepper, cut in 1-inch squares
1 (28-oz.) can tomatoes, crushed and undrained
1 (7½-oz.) can tomato sauce
1 tsp. salt (or to taste)
¼ tsp. finely ground black pepper
1 to 3 tbsp. chili powder (according to preference)
1½ tbsp. vinegar
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 (14-oz.) cans red kidney beans, well-drained

Heat large skillet; cook ground beef (if beef is very lean, add small amount of oil when cooking to avoid sticking), garlic, onions, celery, and green pepper. Crumble beef with fork or potato masher. Cook until meat is no longer pink and vegetables are tender but not browned. Reduce heat to simmer; add tomatoes and juice, tomato sauce, salt, pepper, chili powder, vinegar, and Worcestershire sauce. Stir to combine seasonings well. Allow mixture to simmer approx. 1½ hours. Add kidney beans. Stir. Simmer 30 minutes longer. Serve piping hot with cole slaw and hot buttered buns. Makes 6 servings. NOTE — Freezes well. Makes a tasty "leftover" meal.

SWISS STEAK AND ONIONS

1½ lb. round steak, cut in serving-size portions
½ cup flour (approx.)
3 tbsp. oil (or as needed)
2 cups sliced onions
1 cup sliced mushrooms
2 beef bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 cups boiling water
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Salt an dpepper (to taste)

Pound flour into both sides of steak with meat mallet or edge of saucer. In large skillet, heat oil; brown steak well on both sides. Remove steak from skillet. Set aside. In reserved drippings (add more oil, if necessary), saute onions until tender. Add mushrooms, saute one minute longer. Add buillon cubes that have been dissolved in boiling water and Worcestershire sauce. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Stir to combine seasonings. Return steak to skillet. Reduce heat. Spoon onions and mushrooms on top of steak. Gover. Allow to simmer 1½ to 2 hours or until steak is tender, turning steak half way through cooking process. Add more water, if necessary. When steak is tender, remove to heated platter. Bring sauce in skillet to boiling, stirring to loosen any browned bits in pan. Arrange onions and mushrooms on steak. Pour sauce over steak and vegetables (thicken gravy, if desired). Makes 4 servings.

BEEF FONDUE AND SAUCES

2 lb. beef tenderloin or sirloin steak
3 (or more) beef fondue sauces
1 garlic clove
4 cups peanut oil
chopped parsley.

Several hours before serving, trim fat from meat; cut meat into 1-inch cubes. Cover; refrigerate. Prepare beef fondue sauces for dipping. Approx. 15 minutes before serving, in medium-size saucepan, heat salad oil to 375 deg. F on deep-frying thermometer (a bread cube should brown in one minute). Carefully pour hot oil into 1½-quart or 2-quart fondue pot that has been rubbed with garlic clove; set pot over low heat (not candle) on fondue stand; or heat in fondue pot according to manufacturers' range prepared meat on serving platter (use individual plates, if desired). Sprinkle with parsley. Set out fondue sauces. To cook, spear meat on fondue or long-handled fork. Cook meat in oil until done rare or desired degree of doneness. As fork will be very hot, be sure to transfer meat to second fork. Dip in sauce. Delicious served with baked potato and crisp green salad.

MUSTARD-SOUR CREAM SAUCE

½ cup sour cream
2 tbsp. prepared mustard
dash salt
1 tsp. finely chopped parsley.

In small bowl, combine all ingredients thouroughly. Cover refrigerate. Yields ½ cup.

BUTTER GARLIC SAUCE

½ cup softened butter
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 tsp. finely chopped parsley
dash pepper

Beat butter until light and fluffy. Stir in garlic, parsley, and pepper until well-distributed. Cover, refrigerate. Before serving, allow to stand at room temperature at least one hour to soften. Yields ½ cup.

Note—Sauces are also excellent on pan-fried, broiled or barbecued steaks or hamburgers. For an economical, fun dinner prepare tiny ground beef meatballs. Give each person approx. 10 to 12 meatballs (hot and cooked) with sauces ready for dunking.

FONDUE VARIATION

2 lbs. top round steak, trimmed if excess fat; cut in 1-inch cubes
½ cup Italian-style dressing
3 tbsp. lemon juice
¼ tsp. dried oregano, crushed
1 clove garlic, crushed
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Prepare meat. Combine remaining ingredients in a screw-top jar. Place beef cubes in shallow baking dish. Pour marinade over all. Cover; refrigerate at least 4 hours, turning meat occasionally. Just before serving, drain well. Proceed as directed for "Beef Fondue." Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CHUNKY OVEN STEW

1½ lb. lean stewing beef
¼ cup flour
3 to 4 tbsp. salad oil (or as necessary)
1 large clove garlic, crushed
salt and pepper (to taste)
1 (28-oz.) can tomatoes, crushed and undrained
½ cup chili sauce
1 large onion, sliced
1 cup thinly sliced celery, cut on bias
2 cups thickly sliced carrots, peeled, cut on bias
4 large potatoes, peeled, cut into 1-inch cubes
2 tbsp. chopped parsley
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1½ cups brussels sprouts, remove stems and outer leaves, cut an X on stem end flour to thicken (optional)

Remove any excess fat from meat; cut up, if necessary. Place flour in small bag. Place beef chunks in bag, several at a time; shake bag to coat pieces evenly. In large oven-proof Dutch oven, heat oil. Add garlic. Brown beef on all sides. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add tomatoes and juice, chili sauce, onions, celery, carrots, potatoes, parsley, lemon juice, and Brussels sprouts. Stir to combine. Cover tightly. Cook in 325-degree F. oven for 1½ hours. Stir well. Cook for 1 hour longer or until meat and vegetables are tender. Thicken with flour, if desired. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Best Buys in Vegetables Require Some Figuring

Most of the warmth from burning logs goes up the chimney unless you know your fire "business." First, if you have a deep fireplace, move the grate closer to the front. Shallow fireplaces give out more heat than deeper ones. Then build a fire with smaller logs so that you'll have hot coals sooner. Add larger logs then. And when you know the chimney air is hot, leave the damper open only enough to let the smoke escape and the heat warm you.

A fireplace heat-saver is an air circulator that is made with pipes to extend beyond the top of the fireplace. A fan circulates hot air into the room — up to three rooms, proves one long-time fireplace builder. The circulator costs about $100 and can be installed easily by the homeowner.

Closing the draperies during cold weather helps reflect heat back into the room instead of onto cold windows. But even more heat is saved if draperies don't gap in the middle, down the sides or at the top of the window. A boxed valance prevents warm air at the ceiling from moving down cool walls and cold windows. That's good to know if you're considering new draperies this spring.

If the cold winter convinced you that any new draperies must be lined for extra protection from cold windows, buy some white sheets on sale. Sheeting is tightly woven, more so than most drapery linings. An 81x104 inch muslin sheet on sale for $4 figures out to be just under 6 yards of 40-inch fabric for about 68 cents a yard. Lucky you if you find top quality drapery lining for less.

Out of season, fresh vegetables are often more expensive than frozen or canned vegetables. Their prices should always be compared by cost per serving, whether fresh, canned or frozen. The following is an example of how to cost a half cup serving of cooked green beans.

GREEN BEANS (½ cup per serving cooked)	SERVINGS
Fresh, cut in 1" pieces	6 per lb.
Canned, 1" pieces	2 per 10 oz. can
	4 per 14 oz. can
	6 per 19 oz. can
	8 per 28 oz. can
Frozen, 1" pieces	4 per 10 oz. pack
	13 per 2 lb. pack

For example, if fresh green beans are 69 cents a pound and a pound serves six, then the cost per serving is 11½ cents.

Likewise if a 14 oz. can of green beans (which serves four) is 25 cents, then one serving costs 5¼ cents.

And if, at the same time, frozen green beans are selling at 38 cents for a 10 oz. package, and that serves four, the cost per serving is 9½ cents.

With these figures on serving sizes, it's easy to work out which is the better buy at any season. Remember that the most economical form of produce may change depending on the time of the year and supplies — what's the best buy in February may not be the best buy in September.

— Oversize root vegetables may have a fibrous texture and therefore may not be a good buy.

— Green potatoes are not a good buy — they have been exposed to light and will be bitter. Any green areas should be cut off.

— Wilted vegetables may be revived by sprinkling them with cool water, wrapping them in a towel and refrigerating them for a couple of hours.

— Vegetables should be cooked in a small quantity of water until crisp-tender only. The cooking liquid can be used in sauces, gravies and soups.

— Herbs grown in a garden, window box or flower pot can be dried or frozen for a year round supply.

— Delicious vegetable dishes can be prepared by adding butter, seasonings and sauces to plain, canned or frozen vegetables instead of the more expensive processed vegetables to which butter, seasonings and sauces have been added.

With these guidelines in mind, shop wisely and look for the best buy. Meal planners often pay less attention to vegetables than they do to the meat dish. But with a small amount of care in buying, preparation, and with a touch of seasoning, vegetables can become more than a runner-up to meat without breaking your budget!

Throat Not Lined With Asbestos

I just can't get the soup hot enough for my husband. I don't know why his throat is not full of blisters. Couldn't this be harmful to him? — Mrs. L.M.

Dear Mrs. M.:

I don't know why your husband hasn't injured himself long before this. The delicate lining of the mouth, the esophagus, and the stomach can definitely be burned by excessively hot liquids.

This lining is certainly more sensitive than the skin which, as you know, can be burned by excessive heat.

The mouth does play some role in adjusting to hot fluids, but it is unreasonable to expect it to protect itself completely from such self-imposed abuse.

I'm slowly, or maybe even rapidly, beginning to lose my sanity. I love the man I'm married to, but can't stand his nightly symphony of snoring noises. I'm up half the night while he is blissfully snoring, unaware of the racket he's making. Are there any devices or suggestions that can help him, or better still, me? — Mrs. H.G.

Dear Mrs. G.:

The "Triple S" club has members in all geographic areas and all social circles. One of my readers calls this group the "Snoring Spouse Society."

Like your husband, most members sleep soundly through their symphonic cacophony, innocent as babes of the distress they're causing their captive audiences.

Unless there is obvious disease such as nasal polyps or severe allergies, or in children, large adenoids, snoring is usually due to the relaxation of the muscles of the jaw, the tongue, the palate and the throat during sleep.

After all possible medical causes are eliminated one must resort to any one of the simple anti-snoring devices that have been devised. The most common one is a chin strap with an elastic band worn over the head. In many instances, this has been effective.

In most cities there are "sleep shops." Some of these have ingenious products that are worth a try.

STRIKERS HAULED away by police, like this scene, have been common at Winnipeg's Griffin Steel plant each morning for the past week.

ARRESTS RISE

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg police department Tuesday began taking a tougher stand against strikers and demonstrators who have been blocking the entrance to the Griffin Steel Foundries Ltd., plant in Transcona.

Police Chief Norman Stewart said 10 of about 40 people hauled away Tuesday have been served notices to appear in court on March 15 and will be charged under the mischief section of the Criminal code. He said the charges will centre around the wilful obstruction of entry into the plant.

Red Deer River Dam Called Toilet Tank

INNISFAIL, Alta. (CP) — Nick Taylor, Alberta Liberal leader, says a dam on the Red Deer River will turn the basin into a gigantic toilet tank.

Taylor told a hearing of the environment conservation authority he opposes any plan for a dam on the river and said industry wants a dam so it can flush its effluent down the river.

He blamed industry for applying pressure to have a flow regulation scheme implemented in the river basin.

The real purpose behind the dam proposal is "so you can reach out a hairy paw in the winter and flush it."

Taylor urged all those attending the hearing to fight against a dam anywhere on the river.

Farmers in this district continue where a previous hearing at Spruce View left off in opposing the proposed dam at Site Six.

SCHOOL BURIED TO CUT COSTS

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — A partially underground school designed to cut energy costs by up to one-third has been proposed for the west end of this southwestern Manitoba city.

Brandon school board chairman Glen Williams, who recently unveiled plans for the $2 million school, said it is the first of its kind in Canada.

Williams said savings of 35 per cent have been realized in the cost of cooling such a school in California because of the insulating effects of an earth-covered roof.

The Brandon school would open at street level on one side and be covered with about two feet of earth.

Earth mounds would be formed on three sides of the structure. The school would house about 735 students ranging from kindergarten to Grade 9.

Calgary Kids Given Hope

CALGARY (CP) — Until about a year ago, the 300 kids living in Shaganappi Village in southwest Calgary were faced with a future as bleak as the grey cement boxes they called homes.

Their playground was the street and their destinies were written on a one-way ticket to prison. They were forgotten children in a city that had turned its back.

Then Normann Goebel came along.

Goebel, a father of five, saw that the children living in the low-rent housing project had nothing to consume their spare time except to break the law.

Juvenile delinquency in the project and at a nearby shopping mall was skyrocketing. The police were enemies.

"We had no respect for the law or adults or even ourselves," one boy said. "We spent all out time thinking of ways to get into trouble."

But in January, 1975, Goebel, off work because of a recurring back ailment, was elected president of the Shaganappi Social Club and things slowly began to change.

By early June he had opened a youth club in the basement of one of the units and his dream for a "poor man's country club" had become a reality.

Goebel's philosophy is simple, direct and successful.

"We emphasize participation rather than winning," he says. "We believe every kid has the right to a fair chance. You have no idea what a fair chance can mean to a child."

Goebel complains vehemently that many other community programs are geared completely toward winning and the big loser is the child who can't make the grade.

"If you keep rejecting a kid and tell him he's not good, after a while he'll go out of his way to prove to everyone just how bad he can be."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

One of two men facing escape charges was handed a two-month sentence Tuesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler.

Both are charged with escaping lawful custody and being unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail, and were remanded to Friday on those charges.

A charge of possession of the stolen seat covers was dropped against both men and a stay of proceedings was entered on the theft charge against Storry.

Storry earlier had pleaded not guilty to the theft charge and also elected trial by judge and jury on the escape charges.

However, when Laberge elected trial by judge alone, Mulligan reminded Ostler the men were jointly charged and the judge said the elections would not be recorded until Friday, when Laberge is expected to have a legal aid lawyer represent him.

Storry and 22-year-old Ronald James Kellington are due in provincial court today to begin a preliminary hearing on two counts of extortion, and one count each of kidnapping, possession of a dangerous weapon, pointing a firearm and possession of money obtained by extortion.

The charges arose from a Jan. 29 incident which began in Saanich, and which involved a woman and her two children.

Storry is also facing charges of attempted armed robbery, discharging a firearm and possession of a dangerous weapon in connection with a Jan. 14 Colwood incident.

An escaper from Jordan River who was unlawfully at large for nearly 1½ years was sentenced to a further three months' imprisonment by Ostler.

James Coombes, who pleaded guilty to a charge of being unlawfully at large, did not return from a temporary absence pass on Oct. 10, 1975, and was recaptured Monday in Edmonton, court was told.

Mulligan said Coombes was issued the pass to seek employment and to meet his family in Burns Lake, where he was convicted on false pretences charges and sentenced to 12 months in jail March 27, 1975.

A 21-year-old man snickered in disbelief when he was being led from the courtroom after receiving a 20-day sentence for shoplifting.

Terry Alfred Hildebrandt, of 103 Ladysmith, pleaded guilty to taking three packages of eye shadow from Woolworth's, 1200 Douglas, on Feb. 18.

Legal aid lawyer Barry Gaetz said Hildebrandt took the items for his wife and that the act was one of frustration from not being able to find a job.

Mulligan said that Hildebrandt had to be chased 1½ blocks by store security staff before he was apprehended. Mulligan also read to the court a record of previous convictions for the same type of offences.

Local Talent Given Chance To Perform

Amateur and professional talent from Vancouver Island will be given a chance to perform at Harpo's Cabaret, 15 Bastion Square, which has recently been bought from the Mortay family by Sunstorm Management Ltd.

J. Terry Patterson, president of the company composed of Canadian businessmen, said the cabaret will also feature internationally famous artists.

These will include groups like Chicago's Earl White Review, Brougham, The Infallibles, Konda and the Comix Kids.

The club is being redecorated. This included structional changes, plus an additional 150 seats on the second floor under a geodesic dome.

Victim Freed

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Giovanni Battista Garrasi, 64, a Sicilian notary public, was freed by kidnappers who held him for 51 days. He was reported in a state of acute exhaustion.

Inquiry Ignores Main Problem in Justice System—Macdonald

The public inquiry ordered Tuesday into the allegation by a Vancouver prosecutor that he was offered a bribe by the attorney-general's department ignors the main problem of a chaotic justice system, opposition MLAs said Tuesday.

NDP MLA Alex Macdonald (Vancouver East) said the main problem is that the justice system in Vancouver is "still running out of control" and that the public inquiry does not deal with that at all.

Premier Bill Bennett Monday named Vancouver lawyer Peter Butler to conduct a one-man public inquiry into the allegation made on the weekend by prosecutor Gil McKinnon that he was offered a bribe to stay quiet about state of affairs in the Vancouver prosecutor's office.

Butler's inquiry is expectel to start shortly.

Bennett announced the inquiry after a two-hour meeting Tuesday with McKinnon and five other Vancouver Crown prosecutors.

McKinnon alleged he was offered a salary increase by Vancouver regional Crown counsel Al Filmer which he regarded as an "outright bribe to keep my mouth shut."

Macdonald said after the announcement that the problems in the justice system are only dealt with "when someone goes public and makes accusations of outright bribery."

"It's taken a charge of outright bribvery to even get a meeting with the premier."

Tory leader Scott Wallace said he appreciated the premier's prompt action in calling the inquiry, but said he was more concerned with the larger problem of lack of coordination among the "team of people who make up our justice system."

"I just hope this is not a further Bandaid when indeed we need "radical surgery," Wallace said.

Bennett in the house said the full cabinet will look into the 'delivery of justice" and said he has been given a brief containing recommendations from the Vancouver prosecutors.

He said the problems first started in April, 1974, when Macdonald was attorney-general.

Macdonald later said the real problem with the Vancouver prosecutors arose in March, 1976, when the prosecutors first made their proposals for a new contract to Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Macdonald said the prosecutors are still awaiting a reply from Gardom a year later.

Bennett confirmed in the house that Filmer would stay in his job as regional Crown counsel pending the results of the inquiry.

★ Well, That's No. 11

The provincial government hit probe number 11 Tuesday with the calling of a public inquiry into allegations of bribery in the attorney-general's department.

The tally of inquiries called by the Social Credit government since the legislative session started Jan. 13 now reads: five investigations or reviews by the inspector of municipalities; three in-house or internal probes; one judicial inquiry; one public inquiry, and one full-fledged Royal Commission.

The newest inquiry, headed by Vancouver lawyer Peter Butler, will investigate a charge by Vancouver Crown prosecutor Gil McKinnon that a member of the attorney-general's staff, regional crown counsel Al Filmer, offered McKinnon a bribe to stay quiet about the chaos in the Vancouver justice system.

The public inquiry brings to four the number of investigations announced by Premier Bill Bennett, but still leaves him one behind Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis who has ordered five reviews.

Curtis' investigations all involve the inspector of municipalities, either Deputy Minister Bill Long or two senior departmental officials Chris Woodward and John Taylor — and all also involve Lower Mainland municipalities or districts.

Two of the municipal investigations involve Surrey; one will probe a Matsqui land deal; another will look into a conflict of interest charge in the district of Chilliwack; and the fifth will review the "administrative conduct" of the Dewdney-Alouette Regional District.

Of the remaining six inquiries ordered, four of them come under the purview of Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, but the job of announcing them has been split evenly between the attorney-general and the premier.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom announced two in-house investigations, one into the stock trading deals involving the Grizzly Valley pipeline and the second a look at the controversial M.E.L. Paving Ltd. charge of fraud against the B.C. Railway.

Shortly after those announcements, the premier stepped in and announced broader investigations on both subjects — a judicial inquiry on the whole Grizzly Valley affairs and a Royal Commission into the B.C. Railway.

Bennett has also had the job of announcing the internal investigation into a leak of confidential government documents to the opposition.

Heroic Woman Rewarded

The woman who saved three small children from drowning in Cowichan Lake a year ago was awarded the Royal Humane Society Silver Medal Tuesday by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy.

Gail Flynn, who lives with her husband at the Crown Zellerbach logging camp in Nitinat, performed a "heroic act of which all British Columbians are proud," McCarthy told the legislature Tuesday in introducing Mrs. Flynn and her husband.

Mrs. Flynn, 27, last March rescued three children between the ages of two and three after they had fallen through the ice on Cowichan Lake.

She pulled two of the children to safety by lying on the ice and reaching for them, but had to dive in to rescue the third who was trapped in the water under the ice.

Indians Tested For Mercury

EDMONTON (CP)— Approximately 1,000 Alberta Indians from 30 bands are to be tested for mercury by the federal department of national health and welfare, Dr. John Kirkbride, director of the provincial division of medical services, has announced.

The testing, part of a national program analyzing hair and blood samples, is expected to conclude March 31, with a report to follow, Kirkbride said.

600,000 Tourists a Year in Passport Hassle

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If you are applying for your first passport this year or even renewing one that has expired, you might wonder why it takes a few weeks if you go through the normal channels.

The answer is that you are only one of more than 600,000 Canadians wanting passports in 1977 — nearly 1,700 a day.

As a nation, we always have been fairly footloose when it comes to foreign travel, but recent figures indicate that Canadians are travelling even more than they have in the past. One reason is that fares to exotic foreign locales often are lower than fares within Canada, no small inducement to going abroad.

A total of 653,164 passports were issued last year, putting the total number in circulation at an all-'time high of 2,864,637. The 1975 total issue was 581,417, while in 1973 it was 563,650. It dropped a bit in 1974, to 543,950, but this was due largely to the international oil crisis and the concern obviously didn't last.

Applying for a passport is generally a straightforward affair. All you need is two photographs which can be in color nowadays, $12, an application form and a guarantor. The first three are easy, but the last item can be troublesome.

You see, the guarantor must be someonw the government can call or write and get a reasonably accurate assessment of you if they have any reason to doubt the authenticity of your application. And it cannot be just anyone, such as your neighbor, who may have known you for 20 years or more. It can be a mayor, lawyer, notary, professional engineer or accountant, postmaster, custom collector, judge, magistrate or police officer, minister of the church, someone with a senior university administrative or teaching position, head of a community college or of a secondary or primary school, signing officer of a bank trust company or credit union or a doctor or dentist.

They must be Canadian and must have known you "personally" for at least two years and well enough to certify that what you say on your application form is true.

Pillars of society all! And, although it doesn't say so on the application form, the passport office will accept your Member of Parliament's signature or, if you have connections in the right place, even the Governor-General's. They wouldn't say whether provincial lieutenant-governors are kosher.

Some say this system of guarantors smacks of class structure; that it is, in New Democratic Leader Ed Broadbent's words, "clearly a hangover from the 19th century."

Criticizing it as long out of date and something that should be done away with immediately, Broadbent says "the reality is that the typical Canadian doesn't have continuing access to lawyers or doctors unless he happens to be a doctor or a lawyer himself."

The problem is compounded by the highly transient Canadian population; people often don't stay long enough in one place to build solid relationships with persons who could be guarantors.

About five per cent of the people who apply for passports cannot find a guarantor, so they must resort to a special form, which has to be filled out in front of a "qualified official" who may be a notary, a justice of the peace, a commissioner of oaths or a lawyer. All of these, naturally, charge for their services.

Everyday goodness.

Quake Killed Top Artists

BUCHAREST — At least eight prominent Romanian cultural personalities died in last Friday's earthquake, six of them at a dinner party in an apartment block that collapsed, friends said Tuesday. The dinner party had been at the home of poet and writer Veronica Porumbacu, near the city centre. Those killed when the block collapsed were Miss Porumbacu and her husband, poet Anatole Baconski, literary review editor Mihael Grafita, television drama director Alexandru Boacnete and Toma Caragiu, one of the country's best-known television stars. Another writer, Alexandru Ivasiuc, whose latest novel, The Crab, was recently translated into French and Swedish, was killed by falling masonry while he waited for a bus. Doina Badea, a folk singer, was killed with her daughter when the quake wrecked their home, friends said.

NEW YORK — Former U.S. president Gerald Ford and his wife, Betty, will write their memoirs for $1 million, the New York Times says. In its editions today, The Times said terms have been worked out with Harper and Row publishers York and Reader's Digest.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Singer and actress, Diana Ross was granted a divorce Tuesday from her husband of six years, Robert Silberstein. Silberstein and Miss Ross were married in Las Vegas in 1971 and separated in May 1976.

PASCO, Wash. — A truck driver from Butte, Mont., will get $6,900 back thanks to a playful Siamese cat. The cat nonchalantly discovered the cash — all in $100 bills — while browsing behind a television set in a room at the Red Lion Motor Inn James Wenzig of Spokane, Wash., the cat's owner, saw the money and turned it over to police Sunday and police found the man who lost the cash, Sam Holverson.

$1.5M Suit Won

By Lynne Gordon

NEW YORK — Lynne Gordon, former wife of once blacklisted radio personality John Henry Falk, announced Tuesday she has reached an out-of-court agreement for an undisclosed amount of cash in settlement of her $1.5-million libel suit against CBS.

Miss Gordon, now a Canadian citizen, chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council in Toronto and consumer writer for the Victoria Times, sued the network over the 1975 documentary television film, Fear on Trial.

The film told about Falk's long but successful battle to end allegations of Communist sympathies and the blacklisting.

She claimed the film depicted her falsely as a "classic bitch" and even "telescoped" the number of her children from three to two for story purposes, even though it was supposed to be a "true" account.

She held a news conference to announce the settlement she said was reached in January.

CBS agreed to a use of disclaimer before and after the film whenever it is shown again, she said, and agreed on a "monetary settlement." She said she was not permitted to disclose the terms of the cash settlement.

Sophia's Exit Delayed

ROME — Italian actress Sophia Loren, her face streaked with tears, left Rome before dawn today after undergoing nine hours of questioning by finance police.

The agents, who enforce Italy's tough tax and foreign exchange laws, detained the film star Tuesday night as she passed through passport control on her way to board an Air France flight to Paris.

Police said Miss Loren had attempted to leave Italy under the false name "Miss Prentice," which she used on her embarkation card.

The 42-year-old actress, looking haggard in a blue pants suit and turban hat, was detained in a customs office, where she refused to answer any questions until her attorneys arrived.

Miss Loren talked several times by telephone with her producer-husband Carlo Ponti. Police said she burst into tears frequently during the discussion.

Police also searched Miss Loren's luggage and confiscated several documents they said pertained to banking transactions Miss Loren completed Tuesday morning.

Miss Loren's attorneys said she was not arrested.

"The police merely wanted to ask her a few questions pertaining to their current investigations into persons involved in the cinema business."

According to the Italian news agency, ANSA, police sources said Miss Loren and her husband have been under investigation for tax evasion and the illegal export of foreign currency.

POPE PAUL HAS FLU

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI, suffering from influenza for the first time in three years, appeared at his apartment window in cloudy, chilly weather today to bless a crowd in St. Peter's square and apologize for cancelling his weekly general audience.

"God bless you, and pray to the Lord for me, too," the 79-year-old pontiff said after imparting his benediction at the end of a brief impromptu address. The crowd of 5,000 persons gave him loud applause.

The Pope's voice sounded normal, but he spoke the formula of the blessing instead of chanting it as usual.

Margaret-Stones Split

TORONTO — A spokesman for the Rolling Stones rock group today denied published reports that quoted him as saying Margaret Trudeau left Toronto on Tuesday to accompany two members of the group to New York City.

Paul Wasserman, public relations officer for the Rolling Stones, said in an interview that Mrs. Trudeau told him Sunday she was planning to go to New York this week and stay with a woman friend.

But he denied reports quoting him as saying that Mrs. Trudeau left with lead singer Mick Jagger, who is visiting his daughter in New York, and Ron Wood, who is taking a break from the rock group's activities in Toronto.

Wasserman said the two members of the group left on different aircraft at different times and Mrs. Trudeau was not with either of them.

Mrs. Trudeau attended two performances by the Rolling Stones at a Toronto nightclub during the weekend.

RICHARD BAILED OUT

TORONTO — Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard, who faces a possible life sentence on heroin charges, has been given permission to leave Canada after posting a $25,000 cash bond.

In his second court appearance in two days, the 33-year-old millionaire rock star stood silent and white-faced in the prisoners' dock at the Old City Hall courthouse Tuesday while attorneys' argued about his bail.

More Quake Equipment Wanted Here

Seismographic researchers in Victoria want three or four more sensitive recording devices to help them in long-range studies into earthquake prediction.

Gary Rogers, a seismologist with the department of energy, mines and resources at the Geophysical Observatory in Saanich, say's enlargement of the reporting network in the Puget Sound - Vancouver Island region would be of great value in extending scientific knowledge of earthquake activity.

The observatory works closely with the University of Washington on seismographic research relating to fault structure beneath the seabed of Puget Sound, the Gulf of Georgia and Vancouver Island.

But, Rogers said, U of W has about a dozen seismogrpahic reporting stations in a network around the sound, while there are only four on Vancouver Island and in the Gulf Islands.

"We are trying to map occurrences as fully as possible, to push down the detection limit lower and lower," Rogers said.

About 50 earth tremors a year are measured by the Victoria-based network of seismographs and they represent only a portion of the total occurrences in this part of the region.

"Many smaller ones go unrecorded," Rogers said, suggesting the additional stations could use more sensitive detectors to provide more intense coverage of the whole region.

He noted that the most heavily populated parts of Washington and B.C. are included in the region.

Much of the local effort by seismologists goes toward the setting of standards for the National Building Code, which is directed to materials and requirements for different types of construction in an earthquake-prone environment.

But at the same time there is primary research on what Rogers calls precursor phenomenon and the causes of earthquakes.

Scientists are trying to establish a baseline of information about the characteristics of rock formation and stresses that build up and eventually produce earthquake-producing shifts of earth structures.

Research points are Ottawa, which covers the eastern earthquake belt and Northwest Territories, and Victoria, which records as many tremors as the rest of Canada combined.

Rogers and his colleagues are attempting to establish such parameters as the rate of tectonic movement — the grinding of plates that make up the earth's crust.

One plate at the edge of the continental shelf is thrusting under the next, apparently causing the upper plate, and Vancouver Island, to rise by a distance the geophyysical can measure.

They want to establish that this movement is happening, whether the rate is constant and whether it is changing the rock.

They want to know more about stress in rock and whether this can be taken as an accurate indication of impending earthquake activity.

Electrical conductivity is one approach to this study, in the belief that resistance changes with pressure.

A further aspect is variation in seismic waves and the relationship to earthquake activity.

Statistically it is possible to predict earthquakes on the basis of history by looking back at the records of the past 75 years and the reports of earthquakes since the white man occupied the B.C. coast.

The relationship of stresses and interval between major earthquakes can suggest when the next one may be likely to occur, but not with the kind of accuracy Rogers hopes one day to be able to predict.

Convent Contains Unlikely Relics

By FRANCOIS RAITBERGER

HAVANA (Reuter) — Vestiges of the past splendor of the Cuban middle class lie in a convent in the port of Havana, which houses the most unlikely bric-a-brac in this Communist country.

The 18th-century secularized cloister has been turned into a state-run warehouse where antiques, seized from the wealthy who fled into exile or bought from impoverished aristocrats, are resold to foreigners for hard currency.

A few yards from the bustling docks, past the huge studded door, one steps into a silent world of silver candelabra, ivory statuettes, monogrammed silverware and dusty period furniture.

In Cuba today it seems anachronistic.

From the stone walls, oil portraits of bejewelled grandmothers in black shawls and medal-bedecked Spanish generals in ceremonial attire stare at an array of rusty swords, piles of monogrammed china, silver snuff-boxes, stuffed birds, mother-of-pearl fans and Spanish mantillas.

Colonial paintings hang next to cheap daubs and period pedestals stoically tolerate vases bearing pink, chubby cherubs.

The antiques bear testimony to the wealth amassed by the sugar tycoons, cigar magnates and big landowners who once ruled Cuba, a Spanish colony until the turn of the century.

Most left the island after President Fidel Castro's guerrillas came down from the mountains in 1959, nationalized industry, proclaimed an agrarian reform and turned Cuba into a socialist state.

A handful stayed on and now they increasingly tend to sell their luxury furniture to the government for local currency, not being allowed to sell directly to foreigners.

Those who went in the early period of the revolution often left their houses untouched, hoping for a prompt return. Those who left later had to go empty-handed.

Periodically, jewels and valuables buried in gardens or false walls are uncovered by workers.

Those who leave now are allowed only one suitcase full of personal belongings, but no money, jewels or valuables.

Many left behind large houses, in some cases small palaces with marble staircases, precious paintings and furniture. Some houses in the exclusive western suburbs of Havana became residences for official guests and diplomats, with most of the furniture remaining there.

Others were turned into schools or free boarding houses for students from the countryside.

The furniture was seized by the government and sent to the casa de recuperation (recovery house) to be sorted. Part of it went to museums and the rest was appraised for sale to foreigners.

In the early years of the revolution some precious pieces were lost or burnt as there were few antiques experts. Long-time residents say fantastic bargains were obtainable as priceless art and furniture was sold cheaply when it should have landed in a museum.

Now such bargains are unlikely, as antiques are subject to close scrutiny and appraisal although the prices here are still generally below those that would be asked in Western cities.

The warehouse is run by Cubalse, the state company which caters to diplomats in special stores to spare them the rationing and shortages affecting Cubans.

The diplomatic stores offer little choice of gifts and the diplomats' wives often search the warehouse for their family presents or to furnish their homes. Many diplomats have bought silverware there.

There are Turkish carpets, prayer books, a rusty American rifle and a set of oysters in a glass-case showing the growth of the Japanese pearl, huge antique clocks and advertising ashtrays.

The place is known abroad and professional antique dealers are said to visit it from time to time. But the best pieces are gone.

The Cubans have learned the business.

Curfew Curbs In Fun City

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Bangkok, one of Asia's most fun-loving cities is learning to live with its night-time curfew.

Some bar owners and night-club entertainers are even finding the curfew ensures them a decent night's sleep for a change.

Since the beginning of February, the curfew has come into force at 1 a.m. instead of midnight. It lasts until 4:30 a.m.

The government reduced the curfew hours because of a considerable dollar loss to the tourist industry.

Under the midnight curfew, imposed after the military coup in Bangkok Oct. 6, there used to be a mad scramble for last-minute taxis in the Patpong Road massage-parlor area.

There is less hurry these days.

Taxi-drivers have learned to gauge things finely, getting a passenger back home and returning in time to beat the curfew themselves.

Police still impose the curfew laws strictly and offenders may find themselves in a police cell for the night facing a 200-baht ($10) fine.

There are signs that Bangkok's police have tightened up discipline under martial-law regulations imposed after the coup.

One longtime resident foreigner who tried to bribe a policeman after being caught in a bar after the curfew was indignantly refused and told he now had committed a second offence—insulting a policeman.

The startled foreigner said he had gained a new respect for the police.

Police also seem to be enforcing stricter control over the city's thousands of massage parlors, blue-film shows and many other forms of entertainment.

Police closed down one because they found some girls were not carrying number tags as required by law.

The number presumably gives the authorities a chance to track down girls who steal from tourists.

The new government of Prime Minister Thanin Kraivichien has threatened to close down thinly veiled brothels, which is what most of the massage parlors are.

The numbered girls sit patiently behind one-way glass windows while their customers stare in and make their choice.

Asked how she had achieved success as a millionairess in the massage and bar business, one Bangkok businesswoman remarked: "Everybody likes sex."

NEW HOMES FROM $63,440

A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives —carpeted entry lobbies to most —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
—walk to busline, shops, all schools.

Prices from $63,440 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

309 IN MEMORIAM

ANSLEY — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Diane who passed away March 9, 1973.
Nothing but memories as we journey on Thinking of the past and our loved one gone
None knows the depths of our deep regret
But we remember when others forget.
Loved and sadly missed by Mom, Dad, sisters Debbie, Sandy and daughters Lora and Kaycie Lynn and grandmother and nephews.

GANNER, Raymond — In loving memory of a beloved father and grandfather who passed away March 9, 1971.
Loving and kind in all his ways
Upright and just to the end of his days
Sincere and true in his heart and mind.
Beautiful memories he left behind
Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by his daughter, Loretto, son-in-law Don and grandchildren Myrtle and family and Colleen.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Bully Probe 'Moving'—Stables

District 61 superintendent Alan Stables has formed a committee of school principals — and is forming another of parents — in his investigation into school bullying.
"We're moving on it," he said Monday.
He is also framing a questionnaire that will be distributed throughout the district. He will be ready to give the board a progress report at the March 28 meeting.
But the investigation won't be wrapped up by then, he said.
"If it was that simple, there wouldn't be any bullying."
The report was commissioned by trustees after a number of parents told last month's board meeting of a number of incidents of bullying in or near schools.
Trustees want to find out the extent of the bullying.

Simma Urges Private Takeover of CBC

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Vancouver Liberal MP Simma Holt declared Tuesday that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation should be sold to private interests because of its poor quality and its failure to promote national unity.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said in the House of Commons that he shares Holt's concern that the publicly-owned broadcasting body is not fulfilling its mandate and reported that he has invited the Canadian Radio Television Commission to investigate both the English and French networks.

The outspoken Vancouver-Kingsway MP argued both inside and outside the House that too much attention has been focused on the question of whether there are separatists employed by the CBC's French language network. She said the problem is with the CBC as a whole.

"What's so sacred about the CBC?" she demanded in an interview.

Both Conservative opposition leader Joe Clark and New Democrat leader Ed Broadbent criticized the prime minister in the Commons for "inviting" the CRTC to look into the activities of separatists in the CBC when no specific evidence has been produced on the subject.

The two opposition leaders noted that there have been only vague allegations by cabinet ministers and other Liberals who have called for action to force the corporation to live up to its mandate to promote national unity.

Clark and Broadbent recalled that when opposition MPs in the past have asked for inquiries into alleged wrongdoing or impropriety by the government or its agencies, the prime minister has refused on the grounds that they made no specific charges.

The Tory leader said Trudeau should instruct his minister to make public charges so that Radio Canada employees would have some idea of what they are accused.

The prime minister said it will be up to the CRTC to decide what charges it wants to hear, if it decides to accept his "invitation" to undertake the inquiry.

Broadbent argued that Trudeau should have provided the CRTC with specific instances which he wants investigated "in order to avoid the impresession of creating a Nixon like pressure on the new media of Canada."

Poll Showing Trudeau Ahead Jolted Clark, Tory MP Says

VANCOUVER (CP)— Jack Horner, the Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Crowfoot, Alta., said Tuesday party leader Joe Clark had taken it for granted that he would become prime minister in the next federal election.

Clark was jolted out of this attitude by last week's Gallup poll result showing Prime Minister Trudeau ahead in national popularity, Horner told a Vancouver news conference.

Horner said he personally never gave too much weight to polls over the last year showing Clark far ahead of Trudeau.

"I think that Clark and his advisers have put too much credence in the polls," Horner said. "I'm the politician who never takes anything for granted."

Clark's attitude was understandable, Horner said.

"I think it was a natural thing," he said. "We all are human beings."

This feeling led to an attitude of "let's not rock the boat," Horner said.

Horner said Trudeau is "playing politics" with the issue of Quebec separation.

"The prime minister was down in the bottom of the barrel last August and he's using the Quebec thing," he said. "It's smart politics."

He attacked Trudeau for saying that he would not try to keep Quebec in confederation if there was a strong desire wihin the province to separate.

Rough Loan Tactics Warned

OTTAWA (CP) — The removal of interest rate ceilings on small loans will leave low-income borrowers at the mercy of "intimidating, rough-house tactics" of finance companies, the National Anti-Poverty Organization (NAPO) said Tuesday.

NAPO said proposed legal remedies for borrowers who think they've been charged an excessive interest for a loan are too costly and too complicated for use by low-income consumers.

"The low-income consumer is the most vulnerable of all consumers and will pay rather than argue," NAPO said in a brief to the Commons social affairs committee, which is reviewing the proposed Borrowers and Depositors Protection Bill.

NAPO represents about 1,800 low-income groups, native people's organizations, tenants associations and consumer advocate groups across the country.

The bill is aimed at giving more protection to borrowers by requiring full disclosure of the costs of a loan at each stage of the transaction and by standardizing the way interest is calculated.

Among other things it would replace the Small Loans Act, which now limits the interest rate to from six per cent to 24 per cent a year on loans less than $1,500. The bill would lift the ceilings but put the onus on the lender to prove in court that an interest rate is justified, if challenged by a borrower.

NAPO said legal costs in a routine case would be more than $2.000 and even if a borrower won, he could not expect to recover all of them.

The bill would also permit a borrower to simply stop paying a loan, forcing the lender to take him to court to prove the rate justified. But NAPO said most finance companies would use other forms of harrassment to collect a loan before turning to the courts.

NAPO's legal counsel said there is serious doubt whether many parts of the proposed legislation are constitutional. If the interest rate ceilings were removed and the courts found the legislation unconstitutional, consumers would be left with no protection.

GROWTH PRESSURE ON BUREAUCRATS

OTTAWA CP) — Treasury Board President Robert Andras said Tuesday the government will probably not be able to continue present low growth rates in the public service for long because of population increases and greater demand for services.

Andras told a Commons committee he did not think the government could sustain rates similar to its projected six-tenths of one per cent growth in the number of man-years of work authorized for the fiscal year beginning April 1.

The government said last month the number of authorized man-years in the next fiscal year would grow by 2,081 over 1976-77 estimates to 323,272. A man-yeyar is the employment of one person for one full year or the equivalent — for example, two persons for six months each.

Polysar's Top Brass Unaware Of Kickbacks—Ex-President

OTTAWA (CP) — The former president of Polysar Internatinal SA said Tuesday some employees of the firm knew about kickbacks paid to cusomers, but the information never reached senior executives.

Robert Dudley, now group vice-president of the government-controlled parent, Polysar Ltd. in Sarnia, Ont., said although he was president of the subsidiary he did not find out about irregular payments until last December.

The Commons public accounts committee now is investigating the payments. An inquiry ordered last fall by the company says the payments gave customers the opportunity to evade taxes and foreign exchange regulations at home and to defraud minority shareholders.

In testimony before the committee, Dudley said until December he thought the payments were discounts for volume sales or normal marketing allowances.

The company inquiry, headed by retired Justice John Aylesworth of the Ontario Appeal Court, said that in several cases the company billed customers at inflated prices, then kicked back the difference between that and the actual price to subsidiaries of the customer or to banks in Switzerland.

The issue first arose in 1973 when former auditor-general Maxwell Henderson wrote to Prime Minister Trudeau outlining the practices. But the company says at that time the question was whether it might be legally or financially liable for making the rebates.

Legal and accounting advice at the time said it was not, but Dudley told the committee he now regretted the matter was not pursued in 1973.

CNR POST REFUSED

OTTAWA (FP) — Paul Gerin-Lajoie, former head of the Canadian International Development Agency, Tuesday was counted out of the running for the chairmanship of Canadian National Railways but is expected to be appointed to another position within a day or two.

A spokesman for the Prime Minister's office confirmed Tuesday that Gerin-Lajoie had been offered but had declined ot accept, the CNR job.

The spokesman said two other positions were being considered and it was expected an announcement would be made shortly.

Gerin-Lajoie left his job as President of the Canadian International Development Agency on March 1. He was replaced by Michel Dupuy, assistant under-secretary of state for external affairws.

Gerin-Lajoie has been negotiating regarding a new appointment since that time.

The spokesman for the Prime Minister's office said Gerin-Lajoie had turned down the CNR job because it did not provide him with sufficient authority.

The spokesman said he was not aware of any other reason that the former Quebec cabinet minister had declined the CNR job.

There have been widespread reports that several cabinet ministers objected to Gerin-Lajoie's appointment to the CNR job.

However, the PM's spokesman said these rumor swere contradicted by the fact Gerin-Lajoie had made the decision not to accept the CNR job.

He would not say what other positions are being considered.

There has been speculation that Gerin-Lajoie would accept a major ambassadorial posting. perhaps even to replace Jake Warren in Washington.

Warren resigned as of Dec. 31 but has remained at the post under contract.

Opposition MPs Urge Tax Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Party and Progressive Conservative MPs urged the government Tuesday to reduce income tax for middle- and low-income earners in the March 31 budget.

The proposal come during a Commons debate on an NDP motion condemning "the failure of the government to provide economic leadership."

The motion blamed the government for slow growth in the economy and more than one million unemployed people across the country.

"The situation is deplorable in terms of its effects on people first and foremost." NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said.

The economy should be stimulated by creating jobs and increasing consumer spending power rather than decreasing taxes on corporations, as suggested by Liberals and Conservatives, he said.

Broadbent proposed $1 billion worth of direct tax cuts to replace the current tax-indexing system used by the Liberal government. Tax rates currently decline annually to counter increases in the cost of living.

The NDP measure would mean a tax credit of up to $400 for people earing $5,000 a year or less. The tax credit would decline by $100 for every $500 in earnings to a maximum income of $25,000. After that point, no tax credit would be given because "they need nothing."

The credit would be in the form of a deduction from payable taxes.

Conservative Lincoln Alexander (Hamilton West) did not specify how tax tax cuts proposed by his party would be divided nor what the cut-off income would be.

The debate is one of 25 a year in which opposition parties choose the topic. Some end in a formal vote of no confidence in the government — easily defeated by the Liberal majority — but no vote was called on this one.

Broadbent also proposed more spending on low-income and co-operative housing while Alexander called for building homes "which people can afford."

Other NDP-proposed budget measures included heat-insulation programs for homes and apartments and reactivation of federal capital works programs to create jobs for some 145,000 unemployed construction workers.

Both Opposition parties advocated the government implement the $290 million urban transportation program it promised in the 1974 election.

Alexander said the budget should emphasize jobs by strengthening the private economy rather than by government make-work projects.

Antique Cars Now Too Rich For Hobbyists

By BURT BERLINER

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten years ago, antique car enthusiast William Jackson of Hummelstown, Pa., paid $1,650 for a modest 1932 Aston Martin. This year, he turned down an offer of $14,500 for it.

In Long Beach, Calif., antique auto renovator Dick Yeo is restoring a 1931 Packard 840 Phaeton, bought recently by a client for $8,000. Renovations will cost $20,000 and the restored car will fetch an estimated $50,000 to $75,000.

Such price increases for collectable cars dismay hobbyists like Jackson, a founder of the International Society of Automotive Historians.

"We lovers of old cars resent the emergence of the antique and classic auto as an investment," he said. "We can't afford them any more."

In the last decade, antique and classic car collecting has become a popular tax-sheltered investment with a 10-per-cent to 20-per-cent annual appreciation rate. Actually, there are three categories of collectable ears:

Antique: cars manufactured prior to 1930;

Vintage: popular but lesser quality cars built since the Second World War.

Antique and classic autos are rare and esthetically pleasing. The demand far exceeds the supply. Here are some examples or price growth: In 1972, a 1929 Auburn Boattail speedster brought $20,000; last year, it sold for $43,500. A 1930 Pierce Arrow sports coupe climbed from $4,000 to $19,000 in the same period. A 1936 Packard convertible coupe went from $16,000 to $28,500.

Vintage models, often more affordable, share the same track record: In 1972, a 1957 Chevy Bel Air brought $750; last year it sold for $2,100. A 1953 MG TD Roadster jumped to $4,600 from $2,100. A 1956 Thunderbird went to $5,200 from $2,000.

"We hobbyists are buying relatively new cars now that may become the classics and antiques of the future," said Jackson. "I wouldn't concentrate on these cars if I weren't priced out of the market for antiques."

"I see no evidence of current appreciation rates levelling off," said Dean Kruse, president of Kruse Classic Auction Co., the largest collectable-car auctioneer firm in the United States. The five-year-old family-owned business has increased its commissions by 30 per cent a year.

BUSINESS THRIVING

In its first year, the company conducted seven auctions and made a $69,440 commission representing eight per cent of sales. At its record auction in January, 1976, the company sold 460 cars for $2.5 million and earned $200,000 in commissions.

Hobbyists complain that the rise in the number of auctions and efforts by speculators and promoters to turn car collecting into big business have driven the cost of renovations so high that only syndicates of investors, wealthy collectors and museums can afford parts and labor.

"Inflation in the last decade has forced prices up across the board," contends Kruse. "However, the value of a renovated classic or antique auto remains well above the inflation rate— more than enough to offset increased renovation costs."

Renovation companies say shop rates have risen 400 per cent in 10 years, largely due to increases in the cost of supplies and employee benefits. Increases, however, have failed to discourage customers.

Mounting expenses have forced small shops to expand by offering more services under one roof instead of contracting out specialized work such as painting, steam cleaning and upholstering. Some companies have begun manufacturing their own parts and supplies.

Ten years ago, Hibernia Auto Restoration Inc., in northern New Jersey, was a six-man shop with up to six cars in its stalls at any given moment. Customers paid $4 an hour for labor. Occasionally a complete renovation job brought in $20,000. Today a 17-man staff handles 22 autos at $16 an hour. A complete job may cost $50,000 or more.

Many renovators prefer to work alone.

"This is no assembly-line business—it's an art," said Dick Yeo, who worked as a shop manager for a larger firm but now runs a one-man garage. "When I was manager I had trouble finding qualified workers. So I struck out on my own. Restoration is painstaking, time-consuming work for craftsmen — not businessmen."

The emergence of assembly line renovation companies and the increase in auction sales anger hobbyists who say antique and classic car collecting has deteriorated into a form of speculation.

"There's been too much emphasis on money rather than the love of old cars," said William Bomgardner, manager of the 37,000-member Antique Automobile Club of America.

"If these cars didn't have dollar value, we'd lose 70 per cent of the so-called collectors," said Howard Bennett, owner of the Automobile Restoration Centre of Long Beach, who has 15 antiques and classics. "These people have no real love for the cars themselves."

Quebec Future Tied Closely To Acadians'

By EDISON STEWART

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Concerned for the future and their role in it, New Brunswick's Acadians are preparing to take a hard look at the situation they may be faced with if Quebec leaves Confederation— and even if it doesn't.

"Changes will necessarily happen," said Donatien Gaudet, president of the Societe des Acadiens du Nouveau-Brunswick (SANB). "I think the majority of Acadians realize that Canada will never be the same, but what they'd like to know is what it's going to be."

Many other Acadian leaders — though a few like Mr. Gaudet are glad Quebec has decided to take its future into its own hands—share the concern for the future.

"Whatever is done," said Mr. Gaudet, "we want to know where we are going and what role we could play."

"Anything can happen, so we have to look as objectively as possible at the situation—the actual situation—the future and possible solutions. And there is more than one There are quite a few."

Some of the ideas—such as a separate Acadian province or union with an independent Quebec, appear unlikely, placed as they are at the very end of a list of other possibilities.

More likely subjects SANB is studying or plans to examine include:

—The much-discused but still unfulfilled idea of Maritime union, which would make the Acadians a smaller minority in a larger province.

—The constitution and how it might be improved.

—Duality, which would mean the separate administration of government services. This system already exists in the education department, which has deputy ministers for each of the two major language groups.

The goal is complete equality in all sectors of New Brunswick society, a goal Mr. Gaudet said is not and will not be fulfilled by the province's Official Languages Act because it doesn't place Acadians on an equal footing with their Englishspeaking counterparts.

SANB is particularly disturbed at the province's intention, when the last sections of the act are implemented this July, to avoid quotas based on language and the society now considers too few positions will require bilingualism.

It is also concerned, said Mr. Gaudet, with the failure to implement municipal bilingualism in the Moncton area, which, like the province, finds one-third of its population Acadian.

"If we can't have it (bilingutlism) in Moncton, we can't have it in New Brunswick," said Mr. Gaudet. "It's just a big farce. And if we can't have it in New Brunswick, why try it in Canada?"

So SANB sees duality as the only solution within the existing political system, because then "we have our own people working for our own people."

Both Sides Must Be Fair

But while the future of the Acadians is in large part up to themselves, he said, the future of the country is largely up to the anglophones.

The president of Universite de Moncton, the largest French-language university east of Quebec City, agrees. Jean Cadieux said English-Canadians must "show how much they want to be fair and reasonable."

Solutions to the problem, he said, might include a renewal of the union of Upper and Lower Canada (Ontario and Quebec) in 1840. Another might be the creation of larger, more powerful provincial units, with five provinces instead of 10.

Unlike Mr. Gaudet, he expressed no fear that Acadians might be lost in such large units.

"It is not a matter of statistics," said Mr. Cadieux. "The question is: Do you want the French-speaking group to be living happily with their counterparts in this section of Canada."

Language and other rights, he said, "are an ideological matter we should deal with honestly and not with figures."

A new partnership between the two major language groups is also suggested by Gilbert Finn, president of Assumption Mutual Life Ltd., an Acadian company with more than $100 million in assets.

"I know of no other institution that has not been re-examined in the last 10 years," said Mr. Finn, noting that the Canadian federation has lasted for more than 100 years without major changes.

"It's just good business and natural to have a good look at it," he said.

Some sort of rearrangement, perhaps greater decentralization of authority, is not too big a price to pay to save the country, said Mr. Finn, especially since "we are all going to be sorry about it" if nothing is done. But such a realignment should not all be in favor of provincial powers.

"The provinces have to realize the country needs a central government."

As for the Acadians in New Brunswick, he said they can survive in whatever political organization Canada adopts—if they work and fight for their cause through more involvement in the political and economic life of the province.

"I'm not pessimistic about it."

Another prominent Acadian businessman has different ideas.

Martin Legere, general manager of La Federation des Caisses Populaires Acadiens, a federation of credit unions with assets of $155 million and 140,000 members, said he thinks Quebec's separation "would cause problems for us" and for other French-speaking minorities in Canada.

Maritime Union a Tragedy?

Maritime union would be a further tragedy, said Mr. Legere. It would mean "a long, long fight even to preserve what we have" unless Acadian rights were specified beforehand. "And even this doesn't mean they would be adhered to."

He also expressed doubt whether an Acadian province would be a solution to Acadian problems.

You don't create a province with 215,000 people, said Mr. Legere, when they are spread from Edmundston in the northwest to Moncton in the southeast, with many English-speaking sections between.

"This is not logical. We have to be logical and we have to have a little bit of business sense."

"I personally feel they voted for a change of government."

Dr. JeandPierre Lanteigne, leader of the six-year-old Parti Acadien, said the future for Quebec lies in independence and expressed hope that some of the Parti Quebecois' success will rub off on his party.

There is only one way out for the French minority in this country, said Dr. Lanteigne, and that is to gain some autonomy. Just how much the socialist-leaning Parti Acadien will propose is to be decided at a policy convention this spring.

Dr. Lanteigne said more and more people are realizing "that Acadians have a political party of their own that could be a vehicle for their aspirations." But he conceded that support for the party still is small; according to his own calculations, less than six per cent of the Acadians eligible to vote in the last provincial election supported his party.

More successful French-speaking politicians here do not share his views about the future. Treasury Board Chairman Jean-Maurice Simard, one of the five French-speaking members of the Progressive Conservative cabinet of Premier Richard Hatfield, agrees with those who say "it is maybe time to change the pact of Confederation," recognizing Quebec—his native province—as different, as "a nation."

But he said he strongly believes these people can be accommodated without separation.

Neither does he believe in an Acadian province, urging Acadians instead to exercise their influence through the existing political system.

The senior native Acadian in the cabinet, Natural Resources Minister Roland Boudreau, agrees.

"I don't believe separation is of any value either to Quebec or Canada," he said. "There is no doubt we should fight back.

"I am one of those Acadians who feels we should not join them. We don't want to be another Gaspe."

Greenpeace Adolescent Years Are Past

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation has come of age. It began with the United States Atomic Energy Commission in the Aleutians, rocked and rolled through puberty with the French navy in the South Pacific and reached maturity against Soviet and Japanese whaling fleets, Norwegian and Canadian seal hunters.

The Vancouver-based movement has had a seven-year evolution—germinated in the hippie-yippie 1960s and fertilized by the youthful outrage against technological man's apparent lemming-like determination to wreak an ecological holocaust on a finite planet.

The foundation first hove into world-wide view in the fall of 1971 when members tried to sail within 12 miles of Amchitka, an Aleutian island earmarked by the Atomic Energy Commission for an underground nuclear test.

The attempt collapsed in a confusion of arrests, mechanical failures and dissension. Greenpeace had its first taste of global media coverage, however, enhanced by notables such as actor John Wayne, who railed at what he called the long-haired ecofreaks for nosing into U.S. affairs.

Amchitka has since been declared a wildfowl refuge and the U.S. has banned all nuclear testing outside its continental borders.

Greenpeace sent David McTaggart and his 38 - foot ketch Vega into the South Pacific in 1972-73 to protest French atmospheric nuclear testing on Mururoa Atoll.

That effort also failed, but not before extensive news coverage of a claim by McTaggart that his boat had been rammed by a French destroyer and that French sailors had boarded Vega in international waters and assaulted her skipper and crew.

McTaggart took the navy to court, won his case for damages to Vega, but still is struggling for compensation for an eye injury he claims to have received at the hands of truncheon-wielding French sailors.

The French have stopped atmospheric nuclear testing.

Last year world attention was again riveted on Greenpeace as the group turned its activities homeward to the annual harvest of seal pups on the ice floes to the north and east of Newfoundland.

A Greenpeace plan to ruin the prized white pelts with organic green dye was thwarted when Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc rammed through an order-in-council prohibiting the move.

Greenpeace helicopters were seized at the sealing grounds and local residents displayed resentment towards the invaders.

But if the protest was ineffectual in stopping the slaughter (168,000 pups were bludgeoned), it did focus international press attention on the issue to the chagrin of the Canadian and Norwegian governments.

Greenpeace also used the converted 153-foot minesweeper James Bay later to chase Soviet and Japanese whaling fleets around the Pacific for more than two months.

Greenpeace claimed that at least 90 whales had been saved and perhaps 300 more, but once again symbol outweighed practical gain.

This year, the sealers and whalers are in for another public rendezvous with Greenpeace.

It is an expensive business.

John Frizell, a foundation board member, says all creditors should be paid off by June, leaving a $75,000 bank loan outstanding.

The only full-time paid employees are a book-keeper and an office manager—the rest are volunteers.

Bob Hunter, 34, foundation president, survives on his wife's income. A former columnist for Vancouver Sun, he lectures on ecology and remits fees to the foundation.

This year's protests in Newfoundland and the Pacific are budgeted at about $200,000.

"The biggest single source of revenue is unsolicited donations," said Frizell in an interview.

Greenpeace boasts a membership of about 8,000, with 13 active offices in places such as San Francisco, Montreal, Melbourne, Hawaii, Washington, London and Nashville, Tenn., and in Japan. Two dozen branches are scattered mostly in Canada and the U.S.

Kennedy Probe Head Resigns

LAW MODIFIED

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed revisions to federal patent laws published by the corporate affairs department last year are being modified in response to about 250 briefs received on the changes, says Tony Abbott, federal consumer and corporate affairs minister.

Among the more significant changes are a rejection by Abbott of the proposal that a new patent law operate for only a 10-year interim period pending research into whether Canada needs a patent system at all.

A statement from the corporate affairs department says Abbott favors a continuing patent act.

In addition, the minister rejected a proposal that would entitle employee-inventors to recover control over patent rights for their own inventions if the employer did not put them to commercial use.

Companies suggested they would remove their research operations from Canada if this became effective, Abbott noted and "this is certainly not an appropriate effect for a revised patent law."

CUBA BAN LIFTED

Carter Ends Travel Limits

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has decided to eliminate restrictions on American travel to Cuba, Vietnam, Cambodia and North Korea.

In addition to removing the prohibition on using a U.S. passport for such travel without special permission, the treasury department bans on business transactions — including paying hotel bills — are expected to be lifted, U.S. officials said.

The decision, which one official called "long overdue," does not so much signal changes in U.S. policy towards the four nations as it reflects President Carter's commitment to freedom of movement for U.S. citizens, officials said.

The executive order imposing the restrictions must be renewed every six months. The current order expires on March 18 and it will simply be allowed to lapse.

The four are the only nations to which the government presently seeks to bar travel by its citizens.

It always has been possible for members of Congress, journalists, scholars, public health officials, some athletes and some people traveling for humanitarian reasons to get the restrictions removed from their passports.

Numerous business executives, tourists and other Americans are expected to apply for trips in the coming months.

The lifting of travel restrictions is the first concrete action the Carter administration has taken toward better relations with Cuba. Next on the agenda are talks about extending the anti-hijacking treaty that is due to expire April 15.

In a related incident Carter termed inappropriate the apology venture by a U.S. diplomat for alleged United States involvement in the overthrow of a left-wing Chilean government.

In repudiating the statement on Chile by United Nations envoy Brady Tyson, Carter acknowledged the United States has been at fault in some instances for infringing on human rights accords. But he did not put the 1973 overthrow of Chilean President Salvador Allende in that category.

Tyson said in Geneva he exceeded his instructions but did not act contrary to them in apologizing for what he said was American involvement in the ousting of Allende.

Moslems, Jews Held Hostage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gunmen were reported to have taken over a Moslem centre on Embassy Row today, taking hostages. Earlier gunmen invaded a Jewish Organization in downtown Washington and were holding a number of hostages. Their demands were not known, nor was it clear whether the two episodes were connected.

In Warrensville Heights, Ohio, meanwhile, a black gunman holding a diabetic police captain hostage surrendered as promised today following President Jimmy Carter's televised news conference in which the president said publicly he would talk to the gunman.

Carter said in his news conference that he would talk to the gunman, Corey Moore, 26, if Moore released Capt. Leo Keglovic, 48, but acknowledged such action could set "A dangerous precedent."

COSTLY CUPPA

LONDON (AP) — The traditional British cup of tea will double in price by this summer because the cost of tea is about to soar all over the world, partly because people are switching to it from high-priced coffee, tea dealers said Tuesday. The wholesale price of tea at London auctions already has doubled in the year ending March 1.

Snow Powders Malahat

About three inches of snow fell in the Malahat-Shawnigan-Lake Cowichan district overnight, requiring motorists to use snow tires and chains.

A weather office spokesman said a series of disturbances from the Pacific will continue to bring stormy conditions to the Mainland and Vancouver Island, with intervals of warmer, perrhaps sunny breaks at least until Friday.

But conditions may deteriorate further Friday with cooler temperatures and the possibility of snow.

Meanwhile, new snow in abundance — and the best conditions of a miserable season — were reported Tuesday by ski resorts serving the Vancouver area.

The welcome snowfall, although too late for rejoicing, was general — at Grouse Mountain, Mount Seymour, Hollyburn and in the Whistler ski country.

A Hollyburn Ski Lodge employee said more than a foot of new snow had fallen in the cross-country ski areas nearby.

"Conditions are the best this year. Definitely," he said. "Business has gone away up."

'French Charter' In Que.

Times News Service

QUEBEC CITY — Premier Rene Levesque says his Parti Quebecois government will adopt a "French charter" and set up a special study group to define the precise independent relationship Quebec wants with the rest of Canada.

In an "inaugural speech" opening a new sesion of the Quebec legislature Tuesday, Levesque said the National Assembly will also deal with a new law to permit the holding of a public referendum on Quebec separation.

Levesque, who departed from tradition by reading the inaugural address himself, said the new language law replacing Bill 22 will be the major pillar in his government's policy of affirming Quebec culture.

But while the new law will be a "clear and vigorous" affirmation of French, it will also be "serene and generous" to Quebec's Anglophone minority and will allow them to keep their schools and identity, he said.

Only through national sovereignty can Quebec develop fully, he said, reading from the 32-page inaugural address, which traditionally is read by the lieutenant-governor.

Independence does not mean isolation from the rest of the world, said Levesque.

"It means, rather, establishing a new type of association, inspired by models employed by other peoples which have enabled them to co-operate and develop together without permanent tensions, politicial inequalities and the constant spectre of animosity in traditional federalism."

Special Police Squad To Fight Crime Wave

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A stepped-up offensive against stickup men and bandits has been launched by a special Greater Victoria police squad. The Times learned of the team Tuesday as the area recorded its 27th armed holdup or attempt of the year.

The latest incident in the rash of armed or attempted armed robberies occurred when a man armed with a sawed-off rifle got about $300 from th Imperial Inn.

Oscar Napolean Perron and Edward King Krobel were remanded a week without plea when they came before Judge William Ostler.

A police spokesman said today the special squad played a key part in their apprehension, arriving at the scene within minutes of the 6 p.m. robbery.

The Greater Victoria Emergency Response Team was called out and while officers cordoned off the street, heavily-armed members of the team entered the building and carried out a room-by-room search.

Finding nothing, they withdrew and detectives set up a stake-out. At 10 p.m. the two suspects returned and were arrested without a struggle.

The Times learned from a senior police official that the special squad was created more than six weeks ago to tackle the surge of holdups, described as perhaps the most serious crime wave in Greater Victoria history.

The squad originally involved eight officers drawn from the four core municipalities and the RCMP in Colwood.

But for the past month, because of manpower pressures on the smaller forces, the team has been pared to four investigators, two each from the Saanich and Victoria police departments.

But another highly-placed police spokesman, in on the setting up of the anti-holdup team, said the squad is in operation.

The Times has also learned that Greater Victoria police chiefs have asked the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) to prepare an analysis of the crime situation here.

The chiefs want to know how organized the criminal activity is and the analysis is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

Asked to confirm CLEU's involvement, Gregory uttered a curt "no comment."

FM Radio Ruling Reversed

OTTAWA (CP) — Bowing to public and industry pressure, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) announced Tuesday that it has reversed its controversial policy prohibiting cable operators from carrying some Canadian and U.S. FM radio stations.

The CRTC said in a release that despite reservations it will allow cable operators previously told to drop the stations to start carrying them again if they had originally been scheduled to distribute the programs before Dec. 16, 1975, when the original policy was announced.

The regulatory agency said it will extend its new policy to allow cable operators to apply to carry any U.S. FM stations picked up over the air as long as the stations do not sblicit advertising directed primarily at a Canadian audience.

The commission invited suggestions from the public about the original policy and received 257 written submissions.

About 100 British Columbia residents have written to all federal MPs urging a full investigation into all aspects of the CBC, the Commons was told Tuesday.

The letter, sent Feb. 4 by the B.C. Committee for CBC Reform, complained about the alleged steady deterioration of CBC radio and television programming quality, a lack of local progamming and "the lack of respect for people's intelligence." (See other CBC story on Page 56.)

MAN KILLED IN CRASH

Dead is James Stuart Wood, of 203-1150 Queens.

A passenger Sandra Anne Johnson, 19, of the same address received minor injuries and was treated at hospital and released.

Victoria police said Wood was driving east on Esquimalt at 2:21 a.m. when his car crossed the road, mounted a curb, knocked down a sign and crashed into a stone embankment.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria city council's budget scrutiny sessions over the next several weeks will be conducted in secrecy because Mayor Mike Young is concerned publicity might damage senior staff morale and force some department heads to resign.

Young made the comment to reporters Tuesday, after council's informal caucus meeting supported a motion to bar news media representatives from a series of committee-of-the-whole meetings which will consider detailed departmental estimates as a preliminary to budget preparation.

In early January the provisional budget total stood at $42.4 million, representing an increase of $2.4 million in 5.9 per cent over the actual 1976 budget.

"I think it has become so serious that we had to act," the mayor said. "The city was in jeopardy of losing some of its senior employees."

Young said it is a "very dangerous thing" to risk a deterioration in staff morale merely for the sake of publicly discussing departments' spending proposals, which in the early stages are best thrashed out between the appropriate department head and the alderman responsible for that function.

During earlier council discussion of his recommendation for in-camera meetings, Young had said that if a public budget-screening session produces controversy and criticism of certain officials, "we can be severely, grossly misconstrued."

But in an interview outside the committee room, he denied the comment implies any criticism of news media distortion.

He said he meant that some aldermen might adopt a "quisling-type attitude" toward certain department heads, which would be "dutifully recorded" by reporters and give the public a bad impression

The mayor also denied a reporter's suggestion that the policy is a convenient way of discussing sensitive and perhaps politically embarrasing issues without fear of publicity.

"That's conjectural happenstance which could occur but does not occur," he said.

He pointed out that until

Best Supporting Actor nominee Jason Robards (All The President's Men) has been called by many critics the finest actor currently on the American stage. Robards inherited his love for the theatre from his late father, stage and film star Jason Robards, Sr. Robards Jr. studied acting at the American Academy of Dramatic Art and he made his stage debut as the hind end of a cow in Jack and The Beanstalk.

He won national fame in 1952 at New York's Circle In The Square Theatre in Eugene O'Neill's The Iceman Cometh. In the years following Robards has appeared in several of O'Neill's works including Long Day's Journey Into Night and A Moon For The Misbegotten.

His personal favourite is A Thousand Clowns which he also did on film. Although he is not too fond of most of his early Hollywood films, he does admit a fondness for The Ballad of Cable Hogue which was directed by Sam Peckinpah. His numerous film credits include The Hour of the Gun, St. Valentine's Day Massacre, Isadora, Julius Caesar and Pat Garrett and Billy The Kid.

Inquiry Ends Probe

An RCMP spokesman in Vancouver said Tuesday the force has discontinued its investigations into "possible criminal offences" in connection with the dispute over conditions in the Crown counsel offices.

The spokesman said the investigation was discontinued because of the appointment of Vancouver lawyer Peter Butler to conduct a public inquiry.

An RCMP inspector asked the Vancouver Sun Tuesday to arrange an interview with reporter Hoi-yen Dar who wrote the story quoting prosecutor McKinnon as saying he had been offered the bribe of a salary increase.

The inspector said he was investigating "responsibility for what appears to be several criminal offences."

The Sun refused the request and referred the RCMP to its legal counsel.

Despite the inquiry announcement, Opposition spokesmen attacked the government in the legislature.

There's an atmosphere of intimidation and fear among those who depend on the provincial government, Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) told the house Tuesday.

Lauk said the inquiry is "symptomatic of the kind of thing that's going on in the province."

During debate on ministerial estimates for the premier's office, Lauk said Premier Bill Bennett has set the tone in B.C. which shows his lust for power.

"He will threaten anybody, anyone in this province because he feels they threaten him," Lauk said.

Bennett has demonstrated "arrogance in office, threats to the opposition, threats to minority groups," he said.

Coal Talks Hush-Hush: Gibson

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson accused the government Tuesday of holding secret meetings to formulate a policy on major coal developments in the province.

During debate on budgetary estimates for the premier's office, Gibson said the government has been meeting with representatives of the mining industryy to determine a fair royalty on coal without allowing the public to be involved in any discussions.

Outside the legislature, Premier Bill Bennett described Gibson's charges as "nonsense," saying that the government is researching a coal policy but nothing has been finalized and there have not been any negotiations with any specific group.

Gibson said the government has repeatedly refused to publicize various reports on B.C.'s promising northeast coal reserves and it is expected that a hard and fast policy will be announced without any public discussion.

He urged the government to make public information it has on coal development, including proposals being made on th subject of tenures.

After 23 hours of debate, the premier's estimates passed by a voice vote.

Gibson asked repeatedly if Bennett had any knowledge of secret meetings involving cabinet ministers or senior government officials concerning a provincial coal policy.

The letter referred to a meeting of the "coal cabinet committee," saying it had instructed the association to "establish an industry-government working group to discuss issues related to coal policy formation."

"The objective is to bring together a group of people with a broad knowledge of the coal industry who will review the various policy issues which are now in the final stages of decision," the letter said.

Fyles said in the letter that the committee would be composed of four members from the industry, chosen by the coal association and the Mining Association of B.C., and three or four senior government officials.

Peaceful, Prosperous, Says Idi

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
Washington Post

CAIRO — President Idi Amin of Uganda Tuesday strongly defended himself, his regime and his country, asserting that Uganda is peaceful, prosperous and governed according to law.

In a press conference at the Afro-Arab summit meeting here, Amin was by turn somber and jovial as he ranged for an hour over topics from the controversial death of the country's Anglican archbishop to the abundance of zebras and giraffes in Uganda's national parks.

"There is no cause for alarm," Amin said. "Uganda is one of the most peaceful countries in the world."

As he spoke, Ugandan officials handed out copies of a book, published by the Ministry of Information, that Amin said gives conclusive evidence that the archbishop and two cabinet ministers who died with him were part of a plot by former president Milton Obote to return to power.

It contains photographs said to show Chinese-made arms imported by "pro-Obote fanatics to butcher innocent Ugandans." It also reproduces the text of what purports to be a "memorandum" to supporters in Uganda's Langi and Acholi tribes outlining a scheme to overthrow Amin. The late archbishop, Janan Luwum, is named as a sympathizer with the alleged plot.

Amin has been accused of carrying out massacres among these two tribes and of arranging the murder of the archbishop and the cabinet ministers. The official explanation of their deaths is that they were killed in an auto accident while trying to overpower the army officer who was taking them to be interrogated. The book contains what are said to be autopsy reports from a Kampala hospital saying they died of skull fractures and internal injuries, not bullet wounds.

"We have the rule of law," Amin said. "Anybody who commits a crime is tried according to the law." He said 16 persons are in jail awaiting trial on charges of complicity in the plot and "the Ugandan masses wanted them executed immediately" but he insisted that they be tried.

Amin dwelled at length on some of his favorite themes. He said the imperialists Zionists, Americans, British, Kenyans and Tanzanians are trying to overthrow him. He said he was the "only African" strong enough to challenge these forces. He said Uganda has better toruist attractions than Kenya, with "all kinds of animals" in the game parks and plenty of inexpensive food. But he also dealt unflinchingly with questions about the kind of country he is running.

Amin denied reports that there are Cuban military advisers in Uganda. "We have excellent relations wih Cuba but at the moment we don't have Cuban military advisers," he said.

He angrily rebuffed a suggestion that an international commission of inquiry be allowed into Uganda to investigate reports of atrocities there.

PLO-Jordon Link Reported

Times News Services

CAIRO — Yasser Arafat has agreed to link his Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) with Jordan, Arab sources say, and this may help remove the chief obstacle to resumption of the Arab-Israeli peace talks in Geneva.

Israel has refused to negotiate with a separate Palestinian delegation but has not objected to an Arab proposal that the Palestinians attend as part of the Jordanian delegation.

The sources said King Hussein of Jordan, at a lucheon meeting Tuesday with Arafat, asked the Palestinian leader whether he wanted to establish a formal link before or after the Geneva talks are resumed, possibly this fall. Arafat replied that he would like to forge the bond before the conference, the sources said.

Details were not revealed, but a Palestinian official said the meeting of Hussein and Arafat was the "beginning of the return of Palestinian-Jordanian relations to their proper framework."

The meeting was the first personal contact between the two leaders since Hussein drove the Palestinian guerrillas from Jordan in a bloody crackdown in 1970.

Arafat is expected to receive approval for a linkup with Jordan at a meeting next week of the Palestinian National Council, which acts as a Palestinian parliament and sets PLO policy.

Hussein and Arafat are attending the 60-nation summit meeting of African and Arab states called to mobilize the solidarity against Israel and the white governments of Rhodesia and South Africa.

"The meeting marks the beginning of the road toward normalizing Jordanian-PLO relations," a Palestinian Liberation Organization spokesman said. But it was also the result of a long Arab effort to bring Hussein and Arafat together — and remove a major obstacle to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace plans.

Sadat and his ally, President Hafez Assad of Syria, have proposed that a Palestinain state be set up on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza strip and joined to Jordan in a confederation.

Israel, while rejecting any role for the PLO, has also said the West Bank should eventually be tied to Jordan — making the confederation plan a keyy link in hopes for a negotiated Middle East solution.

Until recently, such a tie was out of the question

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two palatial Embassy Row homes, three luxury cars and other personal property belonging to South Korean businessman Tongsun Park have been seized by U.S. Internal Revenue Service agents here in an apparent effort to keep the assets from being sold or moved out of the country.

According to sources close to Park, who has been abroad since last October, about 15 IRS agents entered Park's homes late Monday afternoon. The agents posted government "seizure" notices on the front doors and put the homes under 24-hour guard.

The agents have spent the past two days making an inventory of Park's furnishings and valuables, including antique furniture, oriental rugs, jade, porcelain and numerous are objects. Tuesday the agents also seized Mercedes, Cadillac and Lincoln Continental automobiles at one home.

In court documents filed just before the agents moved in Monday afternoon, the IRS said it was acting because Park "has neglected or refused to pay" nearly $4.5 million back taxes the IRS claims he owes for 1972 through 1975.

Justice department officials said Tuesday the civil tax action by IRS is unrelated to the current criminal investigation of allegations that Park played a key role in a South Korean government scheme to buy influence on Capitol Hill. Park is reported to have dispensed hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash and gifts to members of Congress to ensure continued U.S. support for the regime of South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

DICTATOR THREAT SEEN IN U.K.

LONDON (Reuter)—A segment of the Labor party expressed alarm today at signs of polarization in public attitudes in Britain and said the country might turn to a dictator if the economy continues to decline.

The group, known as the Social Democrats and including centrist and right-of-centre Labor members of Parliament, published a booklet entitled What We Must Do — A Democratic Socialist Approach to Britain's crisis.

It warned that "proud nations cannot live on a diet of uninterrupted failure" and said Britain's institutions have a built-in bias against change, while class bitterness still hampers progress.

If current economic trends continue, Britain's average national income would likely be, in less than a decade, about one-half the French and on a par with that of Greece, the booklet said.

Darts on Dogs Planned by CIA

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The CIA once was prepared to use treated darts on guard dogs in an effort to gain entry and bug a North Vietnamese embassy, but decided against it because the dogs ate drugged meat instead, documents show.

CIA agents wanted to bug the embassy in an unidentified South Asia nation and were equipped with darts coated with a "dog incapacitant," the reports said.

The darts also were treated with a timed antidote, so the dogs would behave normally when they awoke, the report said.

But the darts were unnecessary because "the guard dogs — in gross violation of proper guard dog behavior — ate meat treated with dog incapacitant which was offered by the entry team," the report said.

The U.S. army, meanwhile, disclosed that it secretly conducted 239 germ warfare tests in the open air between 1949 and 1969, releasing live but supposedly harmless microscopic "bugs" at Washington's Greyhound bus terminal and National Airport as part of the experiment.

The idea, according to a two-volume report the army gave to the Senate health subcommittee Tuesday, was to learn how to wage biological warfare and defend against it.

Rightists Targets In Spain

Washington Post

MADRID — The Spanish police, always diligent in the pursuit of what they considered leftist enemies of the state, are for the first time in 48 years going after rightist extremist groups that once were allies and "ideological collaborators" of the late dictator Francisco Franco's law enforcement agencies.

The chase is reluctant and Spanish authorities have yet to charge any Spaniard with an act of violence against leftists. Nevertheless, the detention last week of 14 rightists, two of them Spaniards, has eclipsed in the minds of the Spanish public the continuing arrests of leftist extremists and Communists throughout the country in the past month.

The crackdown on rightist extremists coincided with the beginning of Supreme Court deliberations last week on the Spanish Communist party's bid for legalization. The party has been outlawed since 1939, when Franco's forces defeated the short-lived Spanish Republic.

Tough Times Predicted When Controls Lifted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Montreal economist Judith Maxwell said Tuesday that Canada faces some tough adjustments when the federal wage and price controls program ends.

"I don't pretend that going back to the market is going to be an easy process," she told the Canadian Conference of the Financial Executives Institute.

"I've had a lot of businessmen tell me, as much as they'd like to get rid of profit controls, they have a great fear of getting rid of wage controls."

But Mrs. Maxwell, director of policy analysis for the C. D. Howe Research Institute, said individual companies must determine their own operational viability.

"Do you want controls forever?" she asked a questioner, adding that she does not see any alternative to returning to a freer play of market forces.

In her address, Mrs. Maxwell said, "I think that many Canadians, in their general philosophy, would prefer to rely on market forces rather than governments.

"But as soon as they find themselves in a ticklish situation created by market forces, they have a tendency to run to governments for help."

Mrs. Maxwell told another questioner she does not have much faith in the tri-partite approach to economic problems, with business, labor and government at the same bargaining table.

"I just don't see how anyone in such sessions can be accountable," she said. European countries where the tripartite approach has worked have a different social and economic structure.

Mrs. Maxwell said there is a sharp contrast between the kind of easy access that AFL-CIO president George Meany has enjoyed with U.S. presidents, and the "highly-adversarial" type of meetings that CLC president Joe Morris has had with Prime Minister Trudeau.

She said, however, that greater consultation between management and labor clearly is needed to reduce some of the unnecessary frictions in Canada's economy.

Mrs. Maxwell said Canadian governments might consider legislation requiring that votes on strikes or settlement offers be conducted by secret ballot. But such legislation could only be introduced when the industrial atmosphere is calmer.

Mrs. Maxwell was also dubious about the notion of giving labor representatives a seat in the management board room of private enterprise firms.

Classic dilemma faces municipal councils as sports clubs and parents demand better facilities— but how can it all be done in these inflationary times without an impossible drain on taxes?

Recreation: We're Playing for Big Money

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Municipal recreation in Greater Victoria is all things to all citizens.

It's the opportunity to skate, swim, curl, jog, golf, soak in sauna and swirlpool, get involved in ballroom dancing, Hatha Yoga, puppetry and a score of other pastimes, play tennis or simply stroll in the park.

It's the chance to meet one's friends and neighbors ("participate in social interaction," as the professionals might say), stave off middle-age spread and generally do one's own thing.

In the case of the city's Memorial Arena it's show biz — everything from ice spectaculars to hard rock — and professional sport which isn't always very sporting.

It's a situation in contrasts, with people flocking to the smart new recreation centres in Oak Bay and Esquimalt, but leaving Victoria's Crystal Pool almost a deserted mausoleum.

It's expensive, with gross operating costs of over $6.5 million a year and taxpayer subsidies of nearly $4 million in the four core municipalities.

And, not least, it's a steady source of controversy and argument.

On the one hand sports clubs, enthusiasts, parents of budding Bobby Orrs and residents who consider their recreation services inadequate demand more and better facilities.

On the other, hard-pressed taxpayers — notably the not-so-athletic elderly, who liken their situation to high-flying Otto Lang's user-pay concept of transportation: you pay, I use — view the soaring deficits with alarm.

Some of the more outspoken critics accuse municipal politicians of self-aggrandizement, bent on erecting monuments to their own financial folly.

By an ironic coincidence, the age of the shortened work week, more personal leisure time and stepped-up demand for publicly provided recreation also happens to be the age of frightening inflation.

Capital costs have a nasty habit of swelling grossly beyond early tentative estimates and — as happened recently in Oak Bay — elected representatives who once sold their proposals with predictions of modest operating costs find their naive underestimates returning to haunt them.

Item: Assuming a six-percent increase this year, a parks laborer in Saanich will earn a total of $16,492 in salary and fringe benefits. In 1958, when Saanich reported proudly that "a parks foreman was added to the staff, responsible to the engineer for the maintenance and operation of all municipal parks and recreation," total expenditure on parks maintenance was $16,936.

Item: Ten years ago a lifeguard employed by the city of Victoria earned $2.02 cents per hour. By 1970 that had risen to $2.66. Last year the lifeguard rate was $4.90.

With cost increases of that magnitude, municipal councils here as elsewhere are presented with a classic dilemma.

How to keep existing parks attractive and well maintained, and perhaps add to the parks system, without placing an impossible drain on taxes?

How to tread that fine line of reducing operating losses on pools and arenas by setting realistic admission rates, without making those rates so high that they drive away many of the residents for whom the centres were provided?

Such questions seem to have been around a long time, but in fact the history of recreation in Greater Victoria (using recreation in the term's broadest sense, as embracing far more than just parks, open spaces and playing fields) spans less than three decades and in most cases is less than 10 years old.

The grand-daddy and pioneer of the recreational monoliths was the Memorial Arena, built at a cost of little more than $1 million and opened Nov. 11, 1948.

For more than 12 years it was the only such building, until the $400,000 Esquimalt Sports Centre with its skating rink, curling rink and banquet hall arrived on the scene in 1961 amid an effusion of municipal pride.

Saanich entered big-league play rather late in the day, but quickly made up lost points.

Feeling the impact of rapid suburban growth in the mid-1960s, the municipality awoke to the realization that its population needed more than roads, sewers, garbage collection and parks.

A consulting firm, A. B. Sanderson and Company, was commissioned to undertake a study of indoor recreation needs in Saanich. The firm's report, produced in late 1966, was adopted as the blueprint for a five-year expansion program.

In 1967 voters approved a comprehensive recreation bylaw for expenditure totalling $1,250,000. of which $950,000 was to be borrowed.

$ $ $ $

Then in quick succession Saanich residents greeted the $560,000 George R. Pearkes Arena (October 1968); the $150,000 Hampton Park senior citizens' centre (December 1968); the $514,000 Gordon Head Recreation Centre and pool (January, 1971); and the $350,000 Cedar Hill Community Centre (February 1973).

SMITH

Oak Bay Bargain May End

Admission rates for the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, which Mayor Brian Smith describes as "one of the great bargains of the western world," may go up soon.

"As a new centre anxious to please I think we probably pegged some of our rates a little low," the mayor said.

Some of these may have to go up to reduce the taxpayer subsidy of roughly three mills on the centre's operating deficit.

"I think it (the deficit) can be reduced without turning away people and turning this into a rich man's club," Smith added.

Victoria, meanwhile, was agonizing over what to do with the Crystal Garden building it had inherited from the CPR in 1965. Faced with an estimated $600,000 bill for a major overhaul of the long-neglected structure, the city council of the day finally decided to build a new pool.

In retrospect, the bitter controversy which surrounded both that decision and the choice of site — in Central Park — seems to have been a portent of things to come. But at the time the new Crystal opened in November, 1971, all was euphoria and the $1.8 million pool designed by architect John Di Castri was hailed as one of the finest in North America.

(It's worth noting that the Crystal Pool and another major asset, the McPherson Playhouse, were the generous bequests of a citizen, the late T. S. McPherson, and not the result of far-sighted fiscal planning by city fathers. Thus in recreation Victoria is free of the heavy debt burden borne by neighboring municiborne by neighboring municipalities. The civic theatre's formal opening was in February, 1965).

Esquimalt, smallest municipality but proud of its pioneering in indoor recreation, added to its stable in December, 1974, with the opening of the new Esquimalt Recreation Centre across Bullen Park from the older sports centre.

Similar in some respects to Saanich's Gordon Head centre, although bigger and more lavish, the Esquimalt model combines 25-metre pool complete with sauna and whirlpool, meeting hall, banquet facilities and activity rooms.

Strangely, it was staid Oak Bay, long the starving outcast of Greater Victoria in regard to recreation, which ended up with unarguably the finest asset of all: the multi-purpose Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Opened with aquatic antics starring Mayor Brian Smith in October, 1975, the $3 million-plus centre houses in one attractive complex big and small pools, two saunas and jet whirlpool, ice rink, six sheets of curling ice and — to the vocal abhorrence of some — a licensed lounge.

Hot on its heels late last year followed Oak Bay's "bubble," the $500,000 four-court indoor tennis centre and only municipal operation of its kind in B.C.

The repercussions of Oak Bay's daring dalliance with the sporting life have been profound.

Internally, the rec. centre and the so-called Tennis Place (also known cynically in some quarters as Brian's Bubble after the municipality's tennis-loving mayor) have revolutionized the recreation scene in Oak Bay and given the lie to its stuffy tweed-curtain image.

Externally, it has helped plunge the Racquet Club into a financial crisis by siphoning off one-third of the private club's membership. And it has lured customers away from recreation facilities in other municipalities, making particularly savage inroads into attendance figures at the Crystal Pool.

The figures speak for themselves. In 1972, the Crystal's first full year of operation, public swimming sessions attracted 133,022 customers, more than doubling the gate enjoyed by its venerable predecessor, the Crystal Garden.

Then began the remorseless downward progression. In 1973 attendance dropped to 130,214 in 1974 to 124,682, in 1975 to 81,923. The figure for 1976 (the Oak Bay centre's first year) was a dismal 74,651, a 44 per cent decrease on the Crystal Pool's peak year in 1972.

Budgeted revenue from public swimming at the Crystal Pool last year was $80,000; actual revenue a shade over $43,000.

The total budgeted operatisg loss was $98,013; actual loss $161,807.

Crystal Pool: from 133,022 users in 1972 to 74,651 in 1976, a 44% drop

Although depressed by such figures, Victoria aldermen apparently do not believe it's worth spending an estimated $80,000 or so to shine up the Crystal's bleary image by adding sauna, pulsating jets and all the rest.

A recent proposal to that effect was viewed skeptically with Mayor Mike Young noting there was no guarantee the costly extras would stimulate wider community use of the pool.

However, officials in both Oak Bay and Esquimalt seem to have little doubt that it is the additional amenities, offering low and middle-income citizens the opportunity to wallow in the hedonic style of the rich, which make their pools so attractive.

"We were designing without frills but we insisted on quality," says Esquimalt Ald. Ken Hill, who points out that senior citizens are among the most regular patrons of the sauna and hydro pool facilities.

The irony is that Victoria could have had such ancillary attractions, and at a much lower price than today's estimates, because the Crystal Pool's architect had included them in his original concept.

But the then council, determined to keep costs as low as possible, deleted the proposals.

And until last month, when the $40,000 cost item received a tentative green light for the first time, subsequent councils had also consistently rejected the idea of installing electric timing in the pool — essential for the staging of major swim meets and championships.

Thus the five-year-old Crystal Pool has failed to achieve two of the most fundamental objectives outlined in the early planning process:

"To make the pool a 'fun place' where people will come because they really want to" and provide facilities for "competitive swimming to British Empire (sic) and Olympic competition standards."

By contrast with the Crystal's vast but thinly-populated vault, the more intimate scale of the Oak Bay centre and its manifest popularity leave the impression of a building humming with life and vitality.

Parks and recreation manager Duncan Russell says monthly attendance at the centre and the nearby tennis bubble is averaging about 90,000, mostly Oak Bay residents but customers also coming from as far afield as Colwood, Shawnigan and Lake Cowichan.

Says Mayor Smith: "I think it has been wildly successful in fulfilling the broad spectrum of community needs among all ages.

"The place is used from dawn till midnight. I was down there at 7:40 this morning (on a late-February day) and the pool was half-full, three courts were being used and there were people skating.

"The use is just fantastic."

All of which seems to bear out the observation four years ago by university professor Colin Campbell, in his comprehensive Greater Victoria Leisure System Study, that Oak Bay residents "have a voracious appetite for recreation."

But there's a price to pay for all this healthful exercise, fun and self-fulfilment.

As Oak Bay tots up the cost of its first full year as leader in the municipal recreation field, some citizens are having public twinges of unease about the imbalance of the balance sheets.

And at least one elected official of a neighboring municipality locks on the Oak Bay situation as a warning of the over-ambitious.

Ald. David Paterson, the Saanich recreation committee chairman and a chartered accountant, believes the "emotional" clamor for more and better recreational opportunities often drowns the voices of economic reason.

"So many people I know live in Saanich but are going to the Oak Bay rec centre and they think it's great," he says.

"But I laugh and I chuckle and I say, wait till you see the financial statement for that baby."

THURSDAY: The true cost of recreation.

Delay Asked On New Power

Premier Bennett will be asked to delay legislation boosting planning powers of the Islands Trust.

Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region Board, said today six of the seven regional districts affected by the change favored such an approach in a meeting at Nanaimo Tuesday. The representative of the seventh district was unable to attend.

Campbell said he will ask his board to support a resolution framed by the Nanaimo meeting and asking Premier Bennett to intercede and the government not to act on the legislation this session.

The changes if approved would strip planning authority for islands within the trust from the regional boards and pass it to the trust.

The most important objection to that change is that it would "disenfranchise" land controls by taking them from elected regional directors and passing them to trust committees where a majority are government appointees, Campbell said.

New Medical Alert Aids Offer a Bit Of Eye Appeal as a Selling Feature

What was that old saying about necessity being the mother of invention?

Well, Bob Lombard doesn't know if it was "necessity" exactly that started him thinking. But he did see a need. And now, after a lifetime in the construction industry (and two heart attacks), Bob is embarking on a curious venture.

"My brother is allergic to penicillin but no one knows and it nearly killed him once when they shot him full of the stuff," Lombard explains. "And my mother is a diabetic — but she just won't wear one of those big ugly bracelets."

Those big ugly bracelets are the kind supplied by the world-wide non-profit organization Medic Alert. They are identified by that name on one side and carry whatever type of illness you may suffer from on the other. That's so in the event of an accident, first aid or medical people will know what special kind of treatment you require.

Medic Alert is non-profit but it's non-glamor, too, says Bob.

"It costs something like $10 to join and for that you get a cardboard card that rapidly disintegrates and a bracelet," he says. "The concept of Medic Alert is good but their product is so damn ugly, not everyone will wear it and they should."

And so, after months and months of research, special designs by Victoria commercial designer Peter Thornton-Trump and "literally thousands of hours spent making thousands of changes," Bob Lombard and his manager Lettie Larson have launched their company Emergency Medical Alert Aids.

"In no way is it my idea to cut them (Medic Alert) down cut them (Medic Alert) down because they're doing a fine job," Bob points out. "But we feel we can offer a much nicer product at the same cost."

So there you have it. A Medic Alert type of operation on a commercial basis and max low

Bob says it's an entirely new thing and to the best of his knowledge there's nothing like it anywhere in North America.

Operating temporarily from a shabby pink apartment building at 339 Island Highway (opposite the Fort Victoria Motel), Lombard, Mrs. Larson and a young secretary are sending small display stands out to doctors in the area. By Friday, all doctors in Greater Victoria should have one of the displays which show a sample of the identification cards and provide application forms to fill in. Within the next few weeks the operation will have been expanded to take in all doctors in Canada and Bob says he's considering approaching drug stores, too.

There is no joining fee for Emergency Medical Alert. You simply pay for whatever of the aids you desire.

It's $3 for the attractive red, white and gold card and it's enclosed in plastic and so, says Bob, will last a lifetime. The cards have spaces for your name, address and phone number, your date of birth, blood type, the particular kind of illness you may have, whether you are allergic to anything, your occupation and your social insurance number. On the back there's a place for your doctor's name and phone number and any emergency treatment you should be given.

The other aids include a neat bracelet with engraving at $7.95, a fashionable triangular pendant hung from a fine gold chain and bearing the words Medical Alert also at $7.95, suit or dress pins at $2.95, embroidered crests (for things like children's sweaters) at $1.95 and car decals at a quarter each.

Bob says doctors don't have to endorse his products but merely allow his display stand to be put in their office or waiting rooms. He has already sounded out a few of the doctors at random and says all the response has been positive.

"From doctors' figures we believe there are at least 650,000 Canadians who need these bracelets and cards," says Bob. "We're confident we'll have about a quarter of a million people under this project in the first 12 months."

. . . new venture

A lot of epileptics or diabetics are embarrassed with their problem and don't want anyone to know about it when as many people as possible should know, Lombard says.

"We feel that by offering people a product that is attractive and desirable, we can help eliminate this embarrassment, this stigma."

Thief's Slip Was Showing

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A sloppy smash-and-grab thief at the University of Victoria Tuesday escaped with nothing but political aspirations.

He also made the mistake of dropping a slip of paper with his name, address and telephone number.

The end result is the election for president of the Alma Mater Society is up in the air for the second time in less than a month.

In the latest incident, about 30 minutes before polls closed, a man smashed a window in the MacLaurin building, roughed up poll workers and grabbed the ballot box.

He ran from the building, jumped into a car and was driven off by two accomplices, the ballot box clutched firmly in hand.

Unfortunately for him, he had dropped a slip of paper, which turned out to be his resume bearing his name, address and phone number.

Student officials, campus security police and Oak Bay municipal police tracked the man down. So far no one has been able to come up with the ballot box.

If the ballot box is found, and appears not to have been tampered with, candidates Brian Gardiner and Douglas Anderson can decide if they wish the ballots to be counted and the election declared valid.

No ballots from any of the polling stations have been counted at this time.

At the Feb. 16 election, two polling stations ran out of ballots shortly before polls closed.

The election was declared invalid after it was decided several students may have been disenfranchised and only two votes separated Anderson and Gardiner.

A second election was called and held Tuesday.
